Aka For men in their late 60s (lest we forget.) I am continuing to strike through some of series voice wreckognition because I find them interesting and occasionally wonder if it is happenstance or design, and if it's a ladder the latter there "seems" to be two hands interfering. (Not sure what I meant by the previous sentence, it's from months ago.) While editing I realized that the unedited parts of this journal sometimes don't make sense… and that's a good reason not to read on .

Aka For men in their late 60s (lest we forget.)
The last volume was embarrassing due to lack of editing - will try to do better this time, need to at least make it coherent, which it ain't but still only looking for a "bee. " (Thanks Siri)
When I strike through words, it usually means Siri miss mis-transcribed it the first time and the words after it are my correction. I'll be doing even less of that because among other constraints, I'm having visual disturbances aka ocular migraines, in the form of my peripheral vision "melting." For decades I've stated at computer screens and TV for 5 or more hours a day. Between that, pre-diabetes? and various forms of lighting I may be ruining my eyes.

Note: I have not edited this very much because it would take forever. Instead shows the hundreds of transcription errors made by series Siri's (Apple's)voice wrecognition/AI, and increasingly using the "strikethrough" format feature on voice-wreck mistakes stead of correcting them because they seem "interesting" at times . Additionally, will not be editing for smooth reading, correct grammar etc. cause it takes too much time. For now on, It's gonna be even more awkward reading but who cares

. Caveat… striking through other words for other reasons such as changing my mind bout them . % aka artistic license .I am continuing to strike through some of series voice wreckognition because I find them interesting and occasionally wonder if it is happenstance or design, and if it's a ladder the latter there "seems" to be two hands interfering.

I heard someone recently say that we've all been slaves sometimes in history I don't know if that's true, but there's probably some truth to it because in one former another, we've all been slaves to something and actually some of our ancestors probably have been slaves in the worst forms But none of us are slaves. Now, at least not amongst the people I know, including those who claim they deserve reparations I disagree with that, but I can see their point of view to some extent they believe they are disadvantage, but I think they may be disadvantage because of $200 basketball shoes that's inflation for you, spending too much money on cars perhaps these are stereotypes, but I believe there's truth to them and there I say it lower IQs (I had to type that manually because for some reason, Siri wouldn't let me wouldn't transcribe the word slow low IQs), and I have to wonder why she transcribed slow instead of low?

It is possible that certain groups of people have higher average IQs than others based on having evolved in regions where it was more difficult to survive and problem solving was more necessary? Most environments probably were difficult… after all didn't we get booted out of the Garden rather early on?

I'm guessing that any differences are minor when it comes to cruelty because humans are humans in my opinion and it may just be that they develop the technology to impose her will a greater extent than others.
% "White devils, savage Indians, knickers niggas etc."(Siri prefers I say knickers.)

She got up to go to the bathroom and I put my hand on the sheet where she was laying and it was warm… I love that! Yesterday she was on the treadmill and while it was moving took her sweater off. I said don’t do that you could fall and you don’t even have the safety teather on! Okay she said. I should have reminded her how much we all need her. It also reminded me that we don’t know how Mr Jones died other than that he felt and hit his head.

Some of us would like to leave a record of our existence here on earth and I guess some others don’t care. Many of us do it by starting families or writing books, recording music, painting, sculpting or burrying things in the ground… Being half Egyptian maybe that’s why I have this desire apparently perhaps more than most.

I have a stop start brain - kinda like the engine in my car. I start to do something, then a thought occurs and I stop, then another thought occurs and I start.

Sometimes I'd like to go find Tommy K., Sal E. and Anthony Z. and exact revenge for their bullying meanness. Tim B. Apparently died already. There may have been others before then, but I don't remember their names and maybe that's why I had mine changed? The New Testament tells us not to exact revenge but to forgive instead-I think the Old Testament is more ambivalent… In any case, From a practical point of view, as well as the afore mentioned, the cost of revenge may be quite high - let Ultimately the Man upstairs decides . Three were minorities and one was adopted so they were disadvantaged or in someway mistreated so they many would excuse them for having a chip on their shoulder and lashing out at people like me, although I was an outcast too. I never thought there was meanness in that comment.

Looking pretty much like the other boys, always "allowed" me to be like a fly on the wall and pretty much listen to their unedited conversations, whether I wanted to or not. I have heard many comments like, "those stinking Arabs." Overtime maybe, that's given me like the song says, "Gravel in your guts, and the spit in your eyes" - Shel Silverstein/Johnny Cash, but I don't claim a lot of it.

We generally don't call animals "beings", that is usually reserved for humans… is there a good reason for that, or are we just being snobs and supremacists?

Listening to Dr. Pippi Malgren talk about the; economy, contingent elections, RFK, Biden and Trump's chances, and the fact that I can't imagine voting for Trump a third time and would never vote for Biden, I think we need an administrator(s) and protectors of the US Constitution running the government. You would still have the other branches aka legislature and Supreme Court for checks and balances, but you would get rid of this dirty game of politics run by special interest money and lies. I think George Washington wanted a strong executive presidency others wanted to presidents. I'm starting to wonder if maybe they were closer to what we should have? One argument for a powerful president was we would need somebody who could act quickly in the Aventa of a national emergency like war… Well, the president has acted quickly in the event of wars, especially in the case event of starting them directly or through proxies.

There's two reasons that I can think of right off the bat… They blame us, don't like us and want to replace us. Oh that's

I need to remember that for a number of reasons it's important at least for me to be polite and respectful to women. I saw a YouTube title today called something like the taboo subject of women being the spoils of war after World War II and I think it happens more often than we can imagine… what a horrific thing, what a generational challenge it may present to women's lives and psyches individually and collectively, etc. and what a black mark on men... I wonder what women think about this subject, and "imagine" they find it horrific… but ask women yourself.

Heading to Salt Creek and I turn on the radio first to Bob and Tom - it's stupid, then to Bloomberg which was equally stupid, and then two religious channels in a row… I listen to just a few seconds and turn it all off.

I go back to one of the religious channels. I think the protestant won for a few seconds, and he says something about for the Gospel of Jesus Christ and think to myself, should we add "as approved by the Emperor (Constantine?")

Sticking books in the ground is a secondary marketing strategy. They're also available online :-)

Most of the smart technology safety features on my Cherokee are almost worthless, but some of the convenience factors are nice compared to what I was driving 20 years ago, which isn't not saying much.

At least the Emperor Constantine allowed a lot of good truthful stuff to remain… at least in my opinion.

The Golden rule still resounds after 2000 or 3000 years however, long it's been around.

My beefs with Constantine are he was violent and murderous, and first and foremost, he was (it seems) intent on maintaining the status quo that had brought him to power and kept him there.

This preacher on Moody's channel is pretty good. He's describing how similar our generation is to the depraved “God hating” generation that Noah lived in and he's implying that we may be punished or will be punished accordingly and similarly.

On the box, Jimmy sings, “The wind cries Mary.”

Meanwhile, on Bloomberg, they're talking about wealth management and inheritors. An inheritance is fine but when you inherit hundreds of millions, or billions of dollars, might there be something wrong with the system?

One reason for skepticism, worry and fear over potential Chinese domination is the guy called Genghis Khan who I think shares their blood and did terrible, terrible things to the vanquished.

Found that the soup container that you take home from the Thai restaurant is the best P cup of all - the lid fits tightly and it's durable. Been using one for about a month. Today used it twice.

Getting back to Genghis Khan and the Chinese I need to remember that my own people and darn near everyone else's have been treacherous and murderous too. Was reminded today of Winston Churchill's involvement in a famine that killed hundreds of

Growth of religion

• Article Talk
• LanguageWatchEdit

Growth of religion involves the spread of individual religions and the increase in the numbers of religious adherents around the world. In sociology, desecularization is the proliferation or growth of religion, most commonly after a period of previous secularization. Statistics commonly measure the absolute number of adherents, the percentage of the absolute growth per-year, and the growth of converts in the world.
Studies in the 21st century suggest that, in terms of percentage and worldwide spread,[1][2] Islam is the fastest-growing major religion in the world.[3] A comprehensive religious forecast for 2050 by the Pew Research Center predicts that the global Muslim population will grow at a faster rate than the Christian population – primarily due to the average younger age, and higher fertility rate of Muslims.[4][5][6]Religious conversion has no net impact on the Muslim population growth.[7][8]In fact, conversion will have little impact on the size of religious groups.[9] It is projected that birth rates – rather than conversion – will prove the main factor in the growth of any given religion.[10]While according to other various scholars and sources Pentecostalism – a Protestant Christian movement – is the fastest growing religion in the world,[11][12][13][14][15][16][17][18][19] this growth is primarily due to religious conversionand denomination switching among Christians.[20][21]

Counting the number of converts to a religion can prove difficult. Although some national censuses ask people about their religion, they do not ask if they have converted to their presently espoused faith. Additionally, in some countries, legal and social consequences make conversion difficult. For example, individuals can receive a capital punishment if they openly leave Islam in some Muslim countries.[22][23][24][25][26]
Statistical data on conversion to and from Islam are scarce.[27] According to a study published in 2011 by Pew Research, what little information is available may suggest that religious conversion has no net impact on the Muslim population, as the number of people who convert to Islam is roughly similar to those who leave Islam.[27][28][29]
Some religions proselytise vigorously (Christianity and Islam, for example), while others (such as Judaism and Sikhism) do not generally encourage conversions into their ranks. Some faiths grow exponentially at first (especially, for example, along trade routes[30] or for reasons of social prestige[31]), only for their zeal to wane (note the flagging case of Zoroastrianism). The growth of a religion can interact with factors such as persecution, entrenched rival religions (such as established religions), and religious market saturation.[32] …

"It seems like the world's divided up between two types of people - the people that value freedom and privacy over safety and then there's people who value safety over privacy… can we agree that privacy is indeed a facet of freedom like maybe the most important… It might embody freedom … there are people who literally value their safety so highly that they would trade their freedom in exchange, and there are people who are the opposite … I always just think about the kind of people who truly value safety over freedom you'd have to grow up differently"… Emerald Breon

"Those who would give up essential Liberty, to purchase a little temporary Safety, deserve neither Liberty nor Safety"… Ben Franklin
"WITTES: The exact quotation, which is from a letter that Franklin is believed to have written on behalf of the Pennsylvania General Assembly, reads, those who would give up essential liberty to purchase a little temporary safety deserve neither liberty nor safety.

SIEGEL: And what was the context of this remark?

WITTES: He was writing about a tax dispute between the Pennsylvania General Assembly and the family of the Penns, the proprietary family of the Pennsylvania colony who ruled it from afar. And the legislature was trying to tax the Penn family lands to pay for frontier defense during the French and Indian War. And the Penn family kept instructing the governor to veto. Franklin felt that this was a great affront to the ability of the legislature to govern. And so he actually meant purchase a little temporary safety very literally. The Penn family was trying to give a lump sum of money in exchange for the General Assembly's acknowledging that it did not have the authority to tax it.

SIEGEL: So far from being a pro-privacy quotation, if anything, it's a pro-taxation and pro-defense spending quotation.

WITTES: It is a quotation that defends the authority of a legislature to govern in the interests of collective security. It means, in context, not quite the opposite of what it's almost always quoted as saying but much closer to the opposite than to the thing that people think it means.

SIEGEL: Well, as you've said, it's used often in the context of surveillance and technology. And it came up in my conversation with Mr. Anderson 'cause he's part of what's called the Ben Franklin Privacy Caucus in the Virginia legislature. What do you make of the use of this quotation as a motto for something that really wasn't the sentiment Franklin had in mind?

WITTES: You know, there are all of these quotations. Think of kill all the lawyers - right? - from Shakespeare. Nobody really remembers what the characters in question were saying at that time. And maybe it doesn't matter so much what Franklin was actually trying to say because the quotation means so much to us in terms of the tension between government power and individual liberties. But I do think it is worth remembering what he was actually trying to say because the actual context is much more sensitive to the problems of real governance than the flip quotation's use is, often. And Franklin was dealing with a genuine security emergency. There were raids on these frontier towns. And he regarded the ability of a community to defend itself as the essential liberty that it would be contemptible to trade. So I don't really have a problem with people misusing the quotation, but I also think it's worth remembering what it was really about.

SIEGEL: Ben Wittes of the Brookings Institution. Thank you very much.

The Man upstairs and Mother nature has so many tricks up their sleeve that we can never understand this world much less the Multiverse.. neither will AI. %Further mess & “bugs?”

Is conservation always good, sometimes good, dumb virtue signaling or worse. Well (no pun intended), looking out the window, there are puddles everywhere and it’s been raining for days. Should I be concerned with conserving water now?
% as is often the case, it’s a distribution problem - if we could send this water to an arid region, things would be great, but with the amount of spending we do on wars it’s unlikely tohappen.

If I find myself having to explain why I bought another one I would say because just in case Revelation is true, there are more of us to protect now. So the two choices are prepare for that, or go to the city center and maybe be vaporized (raptured?)
Think I’d rather head for the hills that’s mentioned somewhere too.

Heard Jordan Peterson interviewing an African woman about colonization and its effect on Africa. She didn’t blame colonization for the problems of Africa although she said it might have a small influence she pointed to Singapore as an example of a country or nation state also colonized by Britain. Its people may not have been brutalized I don’t know and the people weren’t enslaved, but she said they have prospered even more than the UK. It reminds me of the Delicate, if not taboo
IQ issue…

I actually prefer to see the little sweet ladies, not in their underwear, where the cellulite and other imperfections are apparent but instead in their yoga pants or something like tight jeans… so they look like movie stars # does that makes me bad?

Listening to Mayorkas and David Rubenstein on the Economic Club of Washington DC on Bloomberg they don't have to have scripts. They're so well-versed in their ideology that they put on a show without even practicing.

What about Sons of light and Sons of darkness were the Essenes just slinging mud at those on the other side of the aisle? May think it goes back to nobody's perfect, but some are may be more screwed up than others.

Among the two Christian denominations I'm most familiar with/ Protestantism and Catholicism. I'd say the former has is too well known for its work ethic and the latter too well known for drinking… these stereotypes could almost be reversed.

I hear NPR and Fox talking about Ukraine and Israel, and when the human losses are mentioned they sound sympathetic, but they strike me as being more interested in the side they've "chosen" to win than human lives. On these channels and they are like Bean counters and they really don't give a shit about the people who are blown to pieces. All that matters is that their side ends up on top… one might add the religious stations as well… aka CBN etc. % The Watchman and other shills.

As usual, the fine, kind, flowery talk about freedom, democracy, peace and justice is largely bullshit.

We get so many cues from God… just got one from looking at a blanket that said God. We get lot from the people around us too. Just talked to Kayla on FaceTime while in the tub and she said you're still in the tub? Not profound, but I would call that a gentle reminder that I have things to do today.

On today's agenda, is going to the post office to mail the Lichtenberg board then to Salt Creek. Nothing major but there's stuff to do, especially when I get there.

The fact that I've dropped my phone and dropped several other things today and I'm struggling one-handed to get the top off the coffee maker while holding the phone indicates I'm rushing around… should move at a more measured pace and being out of the tub I have the time to…slow down, buddy☺

Wearing crocs around the house I trip up even more often… maybe the baby should get different shoes.

I haven't mentioned the words battle of the sexes for a long time I think, but I need to again and also mention the balancing act associated with it. Truth is the armistice isn't a peace plan. It's important though, because we should not be at war, especially with our loved ones.
I will go down with the ship. I won't put my hands up and surrender. There will be no white flag above my door. I'm in love and always will be Dido.

Place my body on the funeral pyre,

I think we're all fully human no matter what race or ethnicity but I think we're different and you may want to recognize it or not but I do and regardless of IQ be we from Singapore where it high or Nepal or SS Africa where it's low. We're all equally valuable, although we differ in various ways, and we should have the right to associate or disassociate as we please.

A good part of my rushing around has to do with trying to avoid rush-hour traffic, a good part of dropping things has to do with gravity and a good part of tripping has to do with wearing crocs. They're good for lounging but not for moving quickly… this as I pick up the chicken that fell off the pizza onto the garage floor and applied the 10 second rule.

Guess like the saying goes I should accept the things I can't change…trying to adapt as the world changes without eliminating the things I believe in and trying to make everything"" a little better if I can

Was Jimi Hendrix the greatest guitar player ever? Maybe he was the greatest rock guitar player ever and Segovia? might've been the greatest classical guitarist… don't know who knows but a lot of peeps seem to care!:)

It's hard to rank them cause they're so darn many super guitar players… most of them are sadly veritable unknowns. As you know, Hendrix is right up there and usually mentioned as being number one…When I heard his criticism of other bands, if that wasn't out of context or misquoted, me thinks he was jealous. Don't think he was a great songwriter, and can't think of many great songs written by him (lyrics wise anyway), but he died young and probably would've had a few more… anyway he's "the" icon.

Puff!, blew hair off my trimmer like Billy the kid blew smoke off his six-gun .

I was going over what I'd say if Robin asked me why I'm not done with the bathrooms when she gets home from church and it would be things like; I trimmed my hair, wrote some stuff, wanted to get to the store fore it's crowded, and my elbows hurt cause of working in the barn yesterday.

She's not perfect but she's perfect for me, putting up with my shenanigans like whistling… she doesn't like me clapping or snapping my fingers that's OK☺

Sonny doesn't like my whistling either…not sure about the baby or Kayla, they haven't been subjected to as much of it.

Probably should use the Lowe's card more. You get a 5% discount. I think the cash only card at Citibank you only get 2%.

Pretty sure this "Croc shine" is bootleg, but I might be able to reload it with shoe polish too, if that's what they did.

Early on, need to tell the kids never to walk behind a car that's backing up and if you see one backing up, move clear out of the way because they may not be looking in fact they probably aren't.

I'm going to start cutting my own hair again because I keep getting bad haircuts. They really don't give a hoot. The conversations are uncomfortable. Sometimes the language is explicit I can't explain how I want my hair cut. I know how I want it to look, have the tools to cut it and there's only one head I have to master… Maria has dozens.

Turn on the radio to give each of the 10 stations I have pre-programmed a chance, if nothing good is on I'll go to Bluetooth.

The first two stations are commercials the third one's something about an archbishop and the fourth one's a bunch of talk I'll give it a few more tries. The next four start more promising aka Tom Petty but I've heard it 100 times so I skip to a Chris Isaak song I've never heard, then to something on addiction on NPR of all places. Well, not of at all places, but still a station that I don't love.

The last few are Lynyrd Skynyrd - something about Tuesday that didn't sound very interesting. Then to something about ~~murders~~ mergers and acquisitions on Bloomberg and then the religious Moody channel. I think it was a pastor named John being introduced and here I am back to the beginning or to Bluetooth.

If as an adult white male, I get privileged treatment which sometimes I might, is it because of our alleged; money, power, cruelty etc, or might it be that many of us pay our bills on time etc… I'm not the judge☺

I hate to say it, but me thinks church is a place horses go to die.

I'm trying to do the right things - yesterday called my brother but didn't get through and left a voicemail. Hopefully, he'll call back.

I'm listening to the church channel as I drive home from the store. It's a black pastor and he's talking about the word peace in the epistles… he said that it usually refers also to reconciliation. Thermometer on the bank Clock says 78° and it's 10:45 AM ~~Now that I am not editing at all or hardly at all,~~ I feel like a ~~yolk~~ yoke's been lifted off my neck…also learning more about voice recognition and how to get the most out of it so the difference may not be that great.

Weaving through the traffic on 56 street trying to get around really slow cars. A truck puts on its brake lights in the right lane to me. That's a signal that I should make an adjustment myself and it's probably the only warning I'll get.

I'm either a little slow or have too many things to carry in and the alarm goes to the fast beep, meaning there's only have a few seconds before it goes off and calls the monitoring folks. That wouldn't be so bad because we should test it once in a while anyway… anyway I get in under the wire.

Had to leave the garage door open, so hopefully I'll get back to close it fore the flies get to me. They're bound to be out there.

Stairway to heavens on the box, but I don't bother to listen. It's more important things to do and I've heard it 1000 times - still like it though.

It seems natural to me that God would make males and females almost polar opposites in many respects… but I don't know why :-)

Robin arrived just five minutes after me and I haven't even begun the bathrooms…
might have some slaining to do…Turned out there was none required :-)

I would put the chances of Armageddon, Apocalypse and/or nuclear war at 50-50…at least in the relative "short time." We're being dragged there by governments, specially by a few special interest groups in particular. Ours will drag us along via; 401(k's), (maybe) digital currencies, taxation, social credit, scores, cancel culture, finances and merchandising.

Even if I get us all killed, there wouldn't be anything I can do about it
So that is my calculus
Admittedly, I'm not a math quiz
As wrong as some of the founding fathers were about things like slavery and Native Americans, I doubt that very many would be in favor of a central bank digital currency they could track all our transaction or any of the other things that Charles Schwab and company I mean, Klaus Schwab and company are behind
They and their fellow travelers could learn a lot, though, if they were given latrine duty for a long time like to put glasses on, so you don't get splattered in the eyes
Unfortunately, it will sound like being holier than thou, but it seems to me if you vote for candidates from either of the major parties you're voting to blow up people women, and children too

That's not to say we don't have a right of self-defense but most of these people that we blow up we're doing it preemptively so that the battles and the casualties will be 1000 miles away. Not sure how that works.

Despite what emerald said, Why am I feeling that given their druthers most women would prefer a security state over a freedom state? Something organized more like a beehive an ant colony with a queen because after all they can't trust us, our record sisters, and that great. The Bible, I think talks about a worldwide flood, but most of the evidence indicates a more localized one, so I wonder if the apocalypse described in Revelation might also be localized… perhaps in the battle of Armageddon neighborhood?

Competition, truth and lies… aka human history, society and “civilization.”

There’s black society there’s white society there’s Asian society and other societies and we can live together or we can live in parallel universes, which to some extent I think we do … there’s also LGBT law Furies, etc. - can’t we all just get along? % maybe / if we mind our own business  . Robin walked in and set the Protonix cup that I use for washing my hair on the side of the tub. Earlier she asked “do you want the protonix cup?” I said yes but later saw it on the floor and meant to pick it up. Never thought I’d end up living with a full-grown woman…Thank you, Lord.

Zelinski‘s term is over “” and the law has been passed for mobilization lowering the age range for men to be drafted. A database will be created of all Ukrainian men (I think) both inside and outside the country and those in Poland and other nearby countries may be deported to fight for the machine regime. The Question as always usual is, is the war good for the people of Ukraine in general or just for an elite special interest groups? How might CBDC’s, AI etc. figure into this?

This stuff is generally boring is what I tell people and I believe it, but it’s freeing to bury it in the ground. That way I can write whatever I want - maybe. I’m not sure it’ll ever be red read and I’m not sure about the feeling that if it’s meant to, it will be found - so that’s bothersome.

Play conspiracy theorist isn't always crazy because they're not jumping to conclusions or panicking. They're just noticing patterns and a shirt that looks clean on the outside but you've worn for a couple days. Probably still gonna give you body odor. I was reminded of that yesterday.

I saw a very skinny couple walking along the street dressed in African car sort of and caring a bag they looked down. I wonder they're probably very nice people and are they is downrod is a look. This is in Brownsburg on Northville Drive?
First let me point out that it's Monday morning 1043 already 83° and for some reason voice recognition is working terribly today lots of mistakes maybe because it's Monday maybe because of sunspots or something of the like
The black couple that I mentioned a minute ago and looked like they were from Africa made me wonder if they have much of a support system here and that people with great big families are relying on the government often for support of the taxpayer another words where is these folks may also be relying on the taxpayer or maybe they're not and it's important to have a support system so you should have a good family around you with the reasonable number of children that you can afford to support yourself and not flood the market
Ramsey told me about humanoid robots. I think they might be a better companion for me at Salt Creek. They can climb a ladder and they can can bark.
Robbins on the phone with Diana I think there's lots of laughter and chitchat when I talk to my buddies. There's a lot of quiet time. We don't have that much to talk about or just listening time if they do I think I'm more into parallel play the gals as an ancient times do their thing together we are we were a hunter gather they would do what they do we would be out there, sneaking up on things with spears in our hands… occasionally whispering about going for the head or the heart.

Some thing I've noticed about women is that they don't have endless patience, and when empowered they have even less… not that I blame them.

Anymore it's dangerous just to have opinions even among friends to some extent for example, when I think that the Civil War was a mistake, but it is connected to what's going on now because we have been dumbed down ever since we embraced the worst of black culture not the best and now we are geopolitically illiterate, but we are also Fundamentalist and ideological from our education and our churches the tell us not only are we exceptional, but we are unbeatable and not that we are on God side, but we are told that God is on our side and as usual, we are told that unconditional surrender of our adversaries that we call enemies is all that we will accept and I'm just wonderingif Karma or chickens to roost, will have anything to do with it?

"Sat at my window watched the world
Wake up this morning
Purple sky slowly turning golden,
Distant elms so orange
You'd swear they're burning

All this flowing water
Has got my mind wandering
Do you ever finally reach
A point of knowing
Or do you just wake up one day
And say I am going?

What will I tell you
When you ask me why I'm crying?

Will I point above
At the Red Tail gracefully soaring
Or down to below where its prey
Is quietly trembling?

Two thousand years ago Jesus is left is left there hanging
Purple sky slowly turning golden
Cowards at his feet loudly laughing
Loved ones stumbling homeward
Their worlds reeling

Red Tail above my head quietly soaring
Water turns from ice, creek is roaring
He says enough of all this shit, I am going" … Cowboy Junkies,

Songwriter, Michael Edward Timmins

"I woke up and called this morning
The tone of your voice was a warning
That you don't care for me anymore

I made up the bed we sleep in
I looked at the clock when you creep in
It's 6 A.M., and I'm alone

Did you know when you go, it's the perfect ending
To the bad day I was just beginning?
When you go all I know is
You're my favorite mistake

Your friends are sorry for me
They watch you pretend to adore me
But I'm no fool to this game

Now here comes your secret lover
She'd be unlike any other
Until your guilt goes up in flames

Did you know when you go, it's the perfect ending
To the bad day I've gotten used to spending?
When you go all I know is
You're my favorite mistake
You're my favorite mistake

Well, maybe nothing lasts forever
Even when you stay together
I don't need forever after
But it's your laughter, won't let me go
So I'm holding on this way

Did you know, could you tell
You were the only one that I ever loved?
Now everything's so wrong
Did you see me walking by?
Did it ever make you cry?
You're my favorite mistake
Hey, you're my favorite mistake
You're my favorite mistake"… Sheryl Crowe

Listen into Peter Schiff his logo says shift sovereign Well .freedom.power it's the Peter Schiff show and he also has a site I think called shift.co made me wonder about the word sovereign last five orders letters are REIGN this is what Miriam Webster has to say:

People also ask
What is the true meaning of sovereign?
has supreme power or authority

Sovereign has everything to do with power. It often describes a person who has supreme power or authority, such as a king or queen. God is described as "sovereign" in a number of Bible translations.

Is Schiff smart and sincere or a shill?

IMO AI is just the evolution of automation and not yet the great leap forward it's hyped as, if it ever will be. Like humanoid robots and transsexuals, it is artificial,driven somewhat or more by greed and the desire by those who were; bullied, are jealous, fearful, craving luxury "too much", or lazy - aka just about all of us, to lord, hold sway & power over others, especially those they consider to have offended them or to be inferior in some way. Ultimately things like AI "etc" are created by peeps and can't compare to things created by God. Eventually, a humanoid robot may open the door for you, be your bodyguard, fix your toilet and more, but it will always be a reflection of people playing God and chasing riches and not the real McCoy, for these reasons, you will always have to watch your back. % Please consider just keeping "planes, trains and automobiles", from crashing, and more accurate transcription of voices and words… you'll still get rich if that's what you want.

Meanwhile, back at the ranch, Bromo asks the Neuberger Berman guest, why won't other countries come back to treasuries after all blah blah blah?but she never mentions that they're leaving, partly due to the weaponization of the dollar and concern the occupation might; sanction, cancel and confiscate.

Since sometime between the reign of Queen Elizabeth, the first and the landing on Plymouth Rock of the pilgrims, the world has been dominated by Protestants. Not; Catholics, Jews, Muslims, Orthodox Christians, Hindus, Buddhists, Shintos, agnostics, atheists, deists or anyone else. I wonder if that period is coming to an end and if so, will it be gradual or not? Some of these other groups have had spectacular runs as well, but I think the Protestants have taken the cake… Evangelicals and fundamentalists may be the fastest growing denominations.

Change euchre to Ekner unaffiliated Church of the new Golden rule
Heading back to drivers who don't adapt they shouldn't be punished or disadvantage, but that doesn't mean they should sue and expect to win compensation for not adapting

At the farm, I think children should have two sets of adult eyes on them at all times, and if there are two children, then they definitely should have two sets of eyes on the two children and everything else for the adults should be out of the corner, their eyes and the children in the middle of their field of vision
That bit about driving a big safe car with safety features doesn't relieve one of being a responsible driver and a considerate driver and a law, abiding driver. In fact it might increase our responsibility to do those things although we don't have to go out of our light waves to accommodate jerk drivers. We just have to follow the law. I'm practicing not looking at things on the side of the road. It's safer to ignore them just saw a truck that was unusual looking and it had an unusual sign, but I failed and glanced a second time added it said soil and was a small tanker. I don't know if it was a honeydew truck or something else. Also saw some roadkill that looked like a turtle, but I didn't take a second plants at that rather be safe than sorry.

I have the feeling that the people I know have very little understanding of the background of the opinion makers they listen to I, for a long time have looked up these people to determine if they come from a background that might create a bias
Because I think all of us have at least a little bias, and most of us have more than a little and the opinion makers have even more
I don't want the news or anything else filtered through somebody with pronounced bias is. At least not for me
To the list of the things I shouldn't take my eyes off the road to look at the Harley looking driver with a banger looking handlebars who just drove by on Sweetwater Trail

A bird taking off from the middle of the street on Sweetwater as one more thing I shouldn't take a second look at
There's nothing wrong with the golden rule except it probably that's a lot of people off the hook so the revised one where you should do unto others what you should do to yourself instead of what you would want people to do to yourself accounts for more accountability provides more accountability

I'm wondering again about all the lamb that the Native Americans had we're told that they generally didn't have property rights in their belief system, but they fought over the land so who did it belong to and was it up for grabs when the Europeans came? That's an ethical question that you can answer my response. Is that if you can't defend your land it's always up for grabs one way or another. Of course, the native Americans can tell you better than I can. What their beliefs about property are and probably about what their ancestors believes were anyway I've heard that their opinion of ownership is different than ours or was in those days.

"The PCE, the personal consumption expenditure index is the Fed's favorite way to measure inflation. I think it's the favorite way because it's the least accurate. It's the inflation measure that most understates what's actually happening to prices. that's why the Fed likes it, because it's not honest and if the Fed focuses on PCE, it's easier to achieve its 2% target, than if it focuses on other measures of inflation that are less accurate. I think of CS Lewis's quote about Him being this or that, but couldn't be anything else. I think there are many other things He could've been and can be including; sage, Wiseman magician on and on, and I think CS Lewis was putting him in a box. I still pray to Him asking Him to be my savior and believe that He probably did rise on the third day to heaven eventually. It's certainly possible for God to have done and I do believe in God. Humans may eventually be able to do some similar things, but that wouldn't make them even little gods are demon, or Demi gods, and extraterrestrials may be able to do these things already and I certainly don't put them on the same level of God by any stretch of the imagination.

Slavery was a horrible thing, and it has been perpetuated and perpetrated throughout the ages by people of all races although it seems like the black race may have been the most enslaved people of all. I'm thinking about mixed race people now and I think they're fine but I still prefer my people whatever that means to all others and I wonder how many black female slaves were pressured or forced to have sex with white masters? And I wonder what percentage of white masters engaged in such crimes? I also wonder if given the opportunity, and if the roles were reversed, how many black males would engage in such crimes with white women if they owned them? I suppose they would be a curve associated with such things and I can only speculate about what it would look like.

Robin talks about a lady who always gets a ride home from church from her. She can't get her out of the car and she can't get her in because she's wants to visit with everyone before they leave. I didn't say anything but the "trick" may be don't give her a ride in first place. That's easier than trying to get her out and if she's talking to people, that's one way not to let her in the car. She just might be a grifter… but I don't know but honey is doing a good work.

"The Cloward–Piven theory was taught at Columbia University in the 60s. Obama went there as did Madeline Albright and Bill bar and Eric Holder and many of the people who are influential, including Jared Bernstein, the knucklehead chief financial advisor. Futurist Adam Dorr talks about; synthetic meat, green energy and perhaps most of all AI and humanoid robots taking over labor. He's from a thick tank called RethinkX I think and portrays "his" their predictions as more or less positive and utopian, but he strikes me as a somewhat sneaky snake oil salesman, former prof with an agenda, potential to make big bucks and "save the world." Don't know who funds RethinkX but might smell a Harri/WEF-like agenda. He lauds RethinkX's record of predicting the future but I wonder about monkey wrenches. Millions of farmers may not want to be; taxed/regulated out of existence and replaced by corporate food factories, but your friends can buy or force them out. Peeps may want meat, natural food object to being forced to accept your program but you "know you're right", and that might make right. If they don't want to go quietly into the night you'll send them some other way. What do you do with happens to workers? Will you give them universal income so they can; gamble, smoke, drink and "own nothing and be happy?" What about competing agendas and ideologies? Do you think they will sit still and let you railroad them… Not sure about that. Your masters may use; tax breaks, banks, tanks and "facts" to get their way so chaos and war are as likely as your masters of the universe utopian view of things. There are other competing; ideological and religious agendas as committed to their world views as Dorrs backers are to theirs. They're unlikely to sit idly by as his employers attempt to rule them… will they be strange bedfellows when convenient and back stabbers when not? Unfortunately that's as possible a scenario as what Dorr predicts based on RethinkX aka WEF's analysis of the "historical data" to. But what do I know?
I'm unnecessarily rushing around. It's 8 o'clock. I burnt the brush pile Robin's asleep on the couch and we're gonna watch something new but all that really matters is that piece of Bundt carrot cake from Diana and Jeff. Everything else can wait and I'm shouldn't be in a hurry for that.
In fact, it should be the last thing on my list
I should probably realize the thieves, Marius health scares and incidents I've had over the last 10 years are like any other warnings that God of the universe gives us. They only come once so the things I did this weekend were excessive and I hope I don't pay the price.
I’m not too old for manual labor, but apparently I’m getting there and as far as using Roundup type spray, I’ve got to minimize and protect It's 837 and I'm listened out. I just want to sit down and watch something entertaining or newsworthy or informative, but I don't want to talk and listen.
On the other hand, I should probably be glad that there are people who want to talk to me

Or msybe I’m just a last resort

I would venture to say that human impression has been almost universal a.k.a. just as power, corrupts soda strength.

Maybe it's poetic justice that the descendants of the whites who "conquered" America's native people of color, will probably may be replaced by other people of color. It's also ironic imo that so many whites apparently are okay with paying the bills of those who may replace them. I just wonder if the grand kids of these "altruistic" whites will be treated well when they're in the minority and governed or ruled by people of color who may dislike them and seek revenge for past crimes. By then, the white minority may have dwindled to a level of indefensibility, and thanks to decades of "re-education", most will have adapted the bleed into one" philosophy and disappeared into brown America.
% should I promote sex such views, or just keep my mouth shut?

I'm told that I have to vote if I want to have express an opinion on government policies not sure I agree I disagree with that but what if I vote for a third-party candidate, is that throwing my vote away and also forfeiting my right to have an opinion I don't think it should.

Most of these thoughts are in a form of run-on sentences, but that's being done for a reason, I think it makes it a little harder for people to deconstruct what I'm trying to say. Kind of like saying you can't start a sentence with the word "but", etc. Which seems to me to be an attempt by grammatical curious purists to guide and discombobulate the English language in their preferred direction.

Don't know if anybody's actually reading my stuff but they have been several hundred clicks on it probably just clicks maybe reading half a page before moving on and I wonder who they are? Perhaps one or two are people I know wanting to keep tabs on me ha ha I doubt it…

The YouTuber says there are now more Christians in China than in the US. He said 100 million over there. Well I'm pretty sure they're more than that here that at least claim to be Christians and he discusses the Chinese home churches I haven't watched the whole thing yet, but I imagine They're making some changes…

When I say thank you sometimes it means good Lord! In a good way
I'm not saying they should've done the dirty work just said they did it and now others are capitalizing on it. Maybe that's poetic Justice.
So from now on unless things change, I will do a protest vote every election. It will probably be for somebody like grandpa at least this cycle and then John Adams that counter Joan because there's bound to be a John Joan Adams dead or alive who can do better than most of the incomes. That was Rand Paul, not grandpa
So voice recognition still has a long way to go grandpa and grandpa are not the same words dragon speak 25 years ago when I tried it really sucked Siri and the rest are maybe twice as good but in other areas of technology and AI things have improved 100 times
So do brown people and white people dislike each other well, I think it varies from person to person. There is a curve and secondly, there is situational stuff and then also there is emotion and fast twitch muscle which you can look at the crime statistics and see who might lose their temper, worst and first.
According to Judge Napolitano ,Lancit, the medical journal in England, today (July 8, 2024) said that the number of dead in Gazza is 186,000 those nice Zionists. I'm reminded of the old guy in the dentist chair next to me last week. Who said he didn't feel sympathy for them at all. They were getting what they had coming.

They started it
Larry Johnson said Houret reported that the Israelis instituted the Hannibal doctrine, and of the 1200 people reportedly killed on October 7 by Hamas maybe 50 or 60% were killed by the Israelis, due to their Hannibal Doctrine. America supplied the bombs and the Sinus drop them and if it's 186,000, how does that compare to Hiroshima and Nagasaki?
Increasingly me thinks that, "The Occupation", is none other than those, "illustrious", Sons of Darkness. Will you be on their side or with the Sons of Light?
Will we ever see reporting about lancets estimates of the death toll in Gaza in our mainstream media?

So as I leave the house, I ask myself because I'm running short of time is my hair ridiculous or utterly ridiculous if it's a former, I can do it I can go
I thought popped into my head and I thought it was interesting and I was about to record it and then I thought well I want to hear that part of Margaritaville where he says whatever he says I heard it and I forgot the thought it will probably come back in 10 minutes or 10 days and it probably won't be as interesting as I thought
Are all these road rage incidents away of the universe preparing us for difficult times ahead we will really have to watch our top not even while driving the car
Now I remember what it was it's the power corrupts and if you're given the power to write algorithms for AI that is power and you will probably corrupt. I mean, be corrupted
Then I switch over to media and Chiquita by Abba comes on and I hear the first few bars and think to myself I could listen to this 100 times ha ha I'm just kidding. But I do like it and it's chicken Tita not Chiquita. Because Chiquita's a banana
So what if 186,000 have been killed or may have been killed or will be killed in the near future in Gaza due to the war war injuries, bombings disease and maybe even starvation Americans who have decided that they will support Israel unconditionally probably won't change their mind in large numbers at least not now
I can't remember. Because I almost got run off the road or ran off the road trying to get onto 65 south
Regardless, it's pretty typical that we don't like to admit that we might've been wrong
Are there any new developments in the Bible code 10 1520 years ago? It was popular that certain people were finding messages in the Bible coded messages kind of like a game of scrabble or tic-tac-toe or crossword puzzle.
I don't know if it's interesting ironic or notable in someway that during the slave era most mixed race, children or father by white men now it's quite the opposite
It's probably more notable almost certainly more notable is that in the slave era the black women were forced to have sex or distress into having sex with men and perhaps the children or large accidents today I don't think that's the case the white Hispanic or

Asian women who are having babies with black fathers are doing so usually voluntarily, etc., etc. What remains the same is that a large number of them are now raising their children alone?
In the kindness society, I would like to live in under its constitution you would never have the new deal at least you wouldn't let it evolve into what it has become disability for all because once you do that, it's hard to put people back to work productively what are you gonna let them starve? I'd say maybe because none of them would or just one or two just like only one or two would be blown up in minefield if it's market well and mine it like hell on the southern and any other needy border
Because if you don't throw out the shaft or throw out the wheat with the shaft then they're always going to demand it you have to throw down the gauntlet and let them take their chances Heard that "power corrupt absolute power corrupts absolutely for the hundredth time yesterday and it makes me think I'm corrupted enough. It's a good thing. I'm not powerful.

Or the article from Haaretz about so many of the people killed on October 7 being killed by the Israeli army?
Do people forget that in the Bible there were many Israelite in Hebrew Kings, who did terrible things and were punished by God not rewarded. As were there people, and could that happen again, and what does the book of revelation suggest or according to some concretely tell us
Getting out of the doctors appointment and turning on the radio I heard it's on the religious channel. We sounded like the same old same old and then I turn over to the Bloomberg channel and once again it's the same old same old even though the topic is the election, which is interesting because the topic under religious channel is Armageddon.

It’s come to my attention that that old saw about us only using 10% of our brains is false. In fact I think as we get older, we run out of gray matter. So we are accused of being forgetful, which we sometimes are, but also we might be running out of room. For example I have to devote considerable brain power to using the five different remotes in this house for different brands of TVs. Not to mention our cars are different. The controls are basically, opposite in the Lexus and the Jeep.

In his mind? Does Elon have anything to do with the rapture…

The descendants of victims, often demand, retribution or compensation from the descendants of perpetrators, and if they are strong enough, they'll get it
And compensation may be in order
I have no doubt that Elon musk is a genius, but his genius doesn't hold one iota compared to the man upstairs not even an iota of an iota. Who is your faith in?
That doesn't mean the man won't use Elon in his plans… Who knows?
Red tail above my head quietly, soaring water flowing enough of this shit I'm going Cowboy Junkies
I feel no need to have biologically reproduced myself said the guest on the radio and that's fine. I don't either but I don't mind doing it and it's also a privilege to continue a lineage. And those who would guilt me into saying otherwise are full of baloney. Well, that might be a crossway of saying it but anyway I think it's just fine and Danny sugar and candy to try to keep ones jeans and one's parents and grandparents and ancestors jeans swimming in the pool. And making a contribution is fun
The same woman said that she had had an affair with the man when she was 17 and he was 47 and he had kids and was married. She felt bad about it but at the time because of her broken home, she didn't realize it was wrong the moderator on PBS implied that maybe this should be wrong in this day and age and implied to me anyway that it should be criminalized although I'm guessing just for the man the 17-year-old woman and her mine is not deemed responsible.

For her part in the affair. In the PBS moderators opinion, in my opinion, only he is responsible
I would agree that he's a jerk and a cat, but not solely responsible for the affair
It's hard to get these right when you're driving
And if that girl was 18, would that make a difference compared to 17?
Who likes to be outnumbered?
Do you ever reach your point of knowing or you just wake up one day and say I'm going Cowboy Junkies Michael Timmons
To my kids and grandkids, you've inspired me and taught me a lot thank you!

Looking back on the wrongs of history of which my ancestors were complicit and Imo guess what, so were yours but they both had two things in common. They were sinners and were eligible for forgiveness if they repented… that's what I've heard.

There's HR-puffin-stuff and there's pure unadulterated muffin stuff

If this frugality sounds silly, I'm doing it for a couple reasons for one thing. Mom taught us and number two. There's a parable in the Bible about a widow a poor widow with 10 pieces of silver who loses one and turns the house upside down to find it that's going pretty far! % I wonder if it's possible to go too far… Maybe.

I dropped a glass bowl it shattered into 100 pieces took half an hour to clean it all up just to be sure I can accept their diagnosis that I'm moving towards senility and Parkinson's or I can just be especially careful for glass and maybe it won't happen again for a long timesociety teaches old folks that they're losing it and what we lose. In addition to mental and physical is confidence and that's just about as bad.

It's women's equity day and that's fine with me because I believe women contribute equally to society and have the right to have such days and petition, etc. for the rights. Some might say women contribute more than equally to society and I would respectfully disagree with that. I also respectfully disagree with majority rule because out number men and vote in higher numbers and I don't think anyone should roll rule over others which is what it does and does over the barrel of a gun in the final analysis.

With all due respect, there is a line in a song by Fleetwood Mac sung by Stevie Nicks. It says "women they will come and they will go. Did she write that and what does it mean?

Am I dropping things more often? Most likely I am and I have to come to terms with facts like my grip strength is declining, my focus has declined, as have my; concentration, coordination and eyesight. It's called aging. You just have to make the best of it. Adjust and manage the situation as best you can… and slow down and let the chips fall where they may. If people see you slowing down and ask you why questioning your motives and your condition. We can explain or say screw you I plan to choose the former…most of the time.% still haven't mastered it .

Instrumental in the above is to keep learning, and to keep learning we should keep listening… instead perhaps, of talking so much .

Ocular migraine 6:30 AM, July 18?

Maybe shouldn’t get into it and certainly don’t want to harp on it but women use sex while guys want sex. Me thinks it’s perfectly normal for both of us although it leads to problems. Women and men both want to know that they are “still”desirable to the opposite sex, and I guess competitive to each other The discussion could go on and on… it’s one of the things that makes the world go round  .

With all due respect me thinks the Middle Eastern wars and certain others are due to the following; Oil, Zionism, evangelical Christianity, Revival of the holy Roman Empire and the 10 horns, Eastern versus western Christianity, and not necessarily in this order. Byzantium is still alive/revived, although most in the west don’t know it, or have never heard of it… and it has never surrendered to the western Roman Empire and its churches which plundered Constantinople during the crusades? So where does China fit in and does eastern orthodoxy want/demand equality or supremacy?

BY EDNA ST. VINCENT MILLAY
Safe upon the solid rock the ugly houses stand:
Come and see my shining palace built upon the sand!

1938 - Jordon Smith, 86, was born in Georgia, a slave of the Widow Hicks. When she died, Jordon, his mother and thirty other slaves were willed to Ab Smith, his owner's nephew, and were later refugeed from Georgia to Anderson Co., Texas. When freed, Jordon worked on a steamboat crew on the Red River until the advent of railroads.

"For thirty years Jordon worked for the railroad. He is now too feeble to work and lives with his third wife and six children in Marshall, Texas, supported by the latter and his pension of $10.00 a month."

"I's borned in Georgia, next to the line of North Car'lina, on Widow Hick's place. My papa died 'fore I's borned but my mammy was called Aggie. My ole missus died and us fell to her nephew, Ab Smith. My granma and granpa was full-blooded Africans and I couldn't unnerstand their talk.

"My missus was borned on the Chattahoochee River and she had 2,000 acres of land in cul'vation, a thousand on each side the river, and owned 500 slaves and 250 head of work mules. She was the richest woman in the whole county.

"Us slaves lived in a double row log cabins facin' her house and our beds was made of rough plank and mattresses of hay and lynn bark and shucks, make on a machine. I's spinned many a piece of cloth and wove many a brooch of thread.

"Missus didn't 'low her niggers to work till they's 21, and the chillen played marbles and run round and kick their heels. The first work I done was hoeing and us worked long as we could see a stalk of cotton or hill of corn. Missus used to call us at Christmas and give the old folks a dollar and the rest a dinner. When she died me and my mother went to Ab Smith at the dividement of the property. Master Ab put us to work on a big farm he bought and it was Hell 'mong the yearlin's if you crost him or missus either. It was double trouble and a cowhidin' whatever you do.

She had a place in the kitchen where she tied their hands up to the wall and cowhided them and sometimes cut they back 'most to pieces. She made all go to church and let the women wear some her old, fine dresses to hide the stripes where she'd beat them. Mammy say that to keep the folks at church from knowin' how mean she was to her niggers.

"Master Ab had a driver and if you didn't do what that driver say, master say to him, 'Boy, come here and take this nigger down, a hunerd licks this time.' Sometimes us run off and go to a dance without a pass and 'bout time they's kickin' they heels and getting sot for the big time, in come a patterroller and say, 'Havin' a big time, ain't you? Got a pass?' If you didn't, they'd git four or five men to take you out and when they got through you'd sho' go home.

"Master Ab had hunerds acres wheat and made the women stack hay in the field. Sometimes they got sick and wanted to go to the house, but he made them lay down on a straw-pile in the field. Lots of chillen was borned on a straw-pile in the field. After the chile was borned he sent them to the house. I seed that with my own eyes.

"They was a trader yard in Virginia and one in New Orleans and sometimes a thousand slaves was waitin' to be sold. When the traders knowed men was comin' to buy, they made the slaves all clean up and greased they mouths with meat skins to look like they's feedin' them plenty meat. They lined the women up on one side and the men on the other.

A buyer would walk up and down 'tween the two rows and grab a woman and try to throw her down and feel of her to see how she's put up. If she's purty strong, he'd say, 'Is she a good breeder?' If a gal was 18 or 19 and put up good she was worth 'bout $1,500. Then the buyer'd pick out a strong, young nigger boy 'bout the same age and buy him. When he got them home he'd say to them, 'I want you two to stay together. I want young niggers.'

"If a nigger ever run off the place and come back, master'd say, 'If you'll be a good nigger, I'll not whip you this time.' But you couldn't 'lieve that. A nigger run off and stayed in the woods six month. When he come back he's hairy as a cow, 'cause he lived in a cave and come out at night and pilfer round.

They put the dogs on him but couldn't cotch him. Fin'ly he come home and master say he won't whip him and Tom was crazy 'nough to 'lieve it. Master say to the cook, 'Fix Tom a big dinner,' and while Tom's eatin', master stand in the door with a whip and say, 'Tom, I's change my mind; you have no business runnin' off and I's gwine take you out jus' like you come into the world.

"Master gits a bottle whiskey and a box cigars and have Tom tied up out in the yard. He takes a chair and say to the driver, 'Boy, take him down, 250 licks this time.' Then he'd count the licks. When they's 150 licks it didn't look like they is any place left to hit, but master say, 'Finish him up.' Then he and the driver sot down, smoke cigars and drink whiskey, and master tell Tom how he must mind he master.

Then he lock Tom up in a log house and master tell all the niggers if they give him anything to eat he'll skin 'em alive. The old folks slips Tom bread and meat. When he gits out, he's gone to the woods 'gain. They's plenty niggers what stayed in the woods till surrender.

"I heared some slaves say they white folks was good to 'em, but it was a tight fight where us was. I's thought over the case a thousand times and figured it was 'cause all men ain't made alike. Some are bad and some are good. It's like that now. Some folks you works for got no heart and some treat you white. I guess it allus will be that way.

"They was more ghosts and hants them days than now. It look like when I's comin' up they was common as pig tracks. They come in different forms and shapes, sometimes like a dog or cat or goat or like a man. I didn't 'lieve in 'em till I seed one. A fellow I knowed could see 'em every time he went out. One time us walkin' 'long a country lane and he say, 'Jordon, look over my right shoulder.' I looked and see a man walkin' without a head. I broke and run plumb off from the man I's with. He wasn't scart of 'em.

"I's refugeed from Georgia to Anderson County 'fore the war. I see Abe Lincoln onct when he come through, but didn't none of know who he was. I heared the president wanted 'em to work the young niggers till they was twenty-one but to free the growed slaves. They say he give 'em thirty days to 'siderate it. The white folks said they'd wade blood saddle deep 'fore they'd let us loose. I don't blame 'em in a way, 'cause they paid for us. In 'nother way it was right to free us. We was brought here and no person is sposed to be made a brute.

"After surrender, Massa Ab call us and say we could go. Mammy stayed but I left with my uncles and aunts and went to Shreveport where the Yanks was. I didn't hear from my mammy for the nex' twenty years.

"In Ku Klux times they come to our house and I stood tremblin', but they didn't bother us. I heared 'em say lots of niggers was took down in Sabine bottom and Kluxed, just 'cause they wanted to git rid of 'em. I think it was desperados what done that, 'stead of the Ku Klux. That was did in Panola County, in the Bad Lands. Bill Bateman and Hulon Gresham and Sidney Farney was desperados and would kill a nigger jus' to git rid of him. Course, lots of folks was riled up at the Kluxers and blamed 'em for everything.

"I's voted here in Marshall. Every nation has a flag but the cullud race. The flag is what protects 'em. We wasn't invited here, but was brought here, and don't have no place else to go. We was brought under this government and it's right we be led and told what to do.

The cullud folks has been here more'n a hunerd years and has help make the United States what it is.

The only thing that'll help the cause is separation of the races. I'll not be here when it comes, but it's bound to, 'cause the Bible say that some day all the races of people will be separated. Since 1865 till now the cullud race have done nothing but go to destruction. There was a time a man could control his wife and family, but you can't do that now.

"After surrender I went to Shreveport and steamboated from there to New Orleans, then to Vicksburg. Old hands was paid $15.00 a trip. I come here in 1872 and railroaded 30 years, on the section gang and in the shops. Since then I farmed and I's had three wives and nineteen chillen and they are scattered all over the state. Since I's too old to farm I work at odd jobs and git a $10.00 a month pension."

The above Night was not withstanding because it was horrible, I still think we are being steered to a “bleeding into one”, society by the same people who sold “the bomb”, plans to the Russians and have so many other plans for us (they say they’re our masters.)
Watching TV commercials this morning reinforces it / white people are the exception, mixed race couples and blacks are the rule.
% Asians and Hispanics still lag but are “moving up”, in the “rankings.”

“ I will fly away oh glory. I will fly away in the morning to a land with joy whenever where Joy will never end - when I die hallelujah bye-bye I will fly away.”… loving Dennis Quaid’s version!
% Where joy will never end, hope it’s not woke, I hope there’s still some challenges.

Agree with Trump's positions in general, but not the Middle East… Think he may be the actor that Revelation requires, so that may be a good thing in prophetic terms, but devastating in others.

Going to start keeping track of things that make me rush. this morning when my wife turned off the shower I started rushing that shouldn't be a trigger shit should it?
% Nobody's Fault But Mine

There are things I'd like to discuss with my kids like; quitting smoking, losing weight; being generally optimistic not generally pessimistic and to get information from the optimistic positive peeps, but my credibility isn't that great. I've been shot down before and I've also given bad advice, but that can't stop me, or shouldn't anyway, I'm a father I have a job to do, need to do it and do it better .

Even flies know to go to the light …doesn't mean I like them

I use the used paper towels as shop towels, which to some seems silly since paper towels are fairly cheap, but a decent roll is probably a buck and a buck may not mean much till you don't have any… then it might

My Chapstick with SPF eight is also an emergency sunscreen. I can use it all up in one fell swoop if I have to.

How can you call it the Corporation for Public Broadcasting when it's so biased well I know how they can and I know why they can but they shouldn't.

The wine shops slogan is , “find what you love and you'll love what you find”… well, it is a wine shop.

I like name tags and names on cash register receipts if you know what I mean
Every click you make is noted by YouTube or whoever you're on and the algorithm analyzes it to their advantage so they can sell you stuff later on without you waiting too long or without you clicking too soon
I trust God, 100% but no man that much… those final feat
You don't want to be evaluated, not judged - evaluated on the history of your peoples accomplishments. That's fine but I'm buying something else.
I cut into the box carefully. It says something about don't use a sharp instrument and I'm more interested in getting it open safely then getting it open quickly surgery and physical therapy are expensive in time and they don't always work.
Minutes later, I trip over my crocs while still holding the steak knife

I’ve always considered it an honor of privilege and a pleasure to have children and to make them and to make my parents and grandparents happy because of it. .. it’s an individual thing

Another taboo discussing Belle curves and certain populations were at the far right hand of the bell curve. They can do anything we can do "" at the far left there even worse than our far left meaning not that bright or violent or designed to use force instead of finesse.
The far left of the Bell curve is not a political category. It's where people have brute force perhaps but low intelligence so to get their way, they are a little more likely to use route force or is it the far right people with higher IQ of all races are more likely to use finesse or shenanigans or whatever you wanna call it.

So society ends up with people everywhere on the curve using what they have to get what they want or in some cases what they need and society makes it easy because they're working to make the lowest common denominator able to function, but those at the high end can really function and take advantage of the situation
And a lot of them do
In the hierarchy of things, I might trip over that the baby has left around or that we have the Cap to the peanuts thermos is high on the list. It's the same color as the sunroom floor.
And another thing don't leave footprints after she's clean the floor
The radio pastor finished and said, “and everyone said amen.”
A little while later they were talking about Jehovah’s Witnesses and how lost they are. I think the dominant church is dominant for a reason and it may not be a good one.

For whatever reason you can do everything "" right and still get hit by a bus or thrown under one
I certainly like it when people say amen I've got nothing against that for whatever that's worth which isn't much but what I don't particularly love is when they say and everyone said amen. That means this guy is your conduit in his opinion your leader, your shepherd and it just seems to me. We don't need such a profound layer because they're not profound. They're just like us even the pope even Billy Graham.
It reminds me of when I was at a particular church and the kids in the high school section started talking in tongues first one then another than another it was peer pressure and when they say, and everyone said amen and everyone in the church says it they are leading you by the nose like a calf
I don't know if it's solidarity, comrade ship brotherhood sisterhood whatever but it seems to me it's contrived when some guy is encouraging. In fact in my opinion, pressuring everyone through peer pressure to agree with him instead of to think for themselves.
It's a technique that's been used since the beginning of time it must be very effective
And the "" problem is what it leads to wars burning at the stake, burning books, burning people. Censoring people, etc.
The organized panhandlers are getting more creative. I don't believe their signs. The one lady said in bright, big, bright letters, single mom, three kids need money, smiling, and actually dressed nicely. Her partner at the next light looked shabby their part of an organized group they give some of their money to the organizers. I wonder if it's antifa or an ally of them

I think we need a three party system. That's probably enough certainly one or two parties. One party is not enough two parties. In my opinion hasn't turned out to be enough. We need three viable parties. We don't have one. We have both extremes and nothing in the middle, although the extremes can 10 towards the middle at times.
And if you say the middle is lukewarm, I would say this is not religion. This is government. Maybe it should be lukewarm most of the time. And I believe in separation of church and state by a steel curtain
That curtain should be a mile high, a mile wide and an alloy of tungsten and steel at least
You don't have to forbid people to read certain books. You just have to discourage them and peer pressure. Will do the rest.
They will try to trap you with questions about your beliefs. Good luck. They will undoubtedly hold it against you if you disagree with them. You might survive
Bolly pulpits and cat bird seats

I will treat stinging creatures in our abode or proximity with extreme prejudice… I will not go out of my way to abide them.
This, as I try to make a fist out of my swollen hand, stung by a hornet yesterday. It was under the drums and didn't like me playing them. Its ilk vacate - not us. I believe they have a place in ecosystem that they were created by God, but not to live where we live and I don't think they have a soul or think in a manner that Garner is much respect they're instinctive, nasty pests when they insert themselves into our lives… And my hand hurts. I'm wholly unconvinced by their proponents arguments, which have convinced many people they are lovely creatures or at least creatures deserving protection, and although they are amazing in their own right, they are to great extent, a scourge on mankind, along with other bugs and critters that are vectors for pain or disease. I wish them neither good or bad. I wish them; go, git, goodbye and good riddance! % tell us how you

“Any time God leads you into the wilderness, it’s for a divine purpose”… Bishop Hylton

I am against universal suffrage, not against everyone having a right to vote who is a contributing member of society - primarily measured by not being on the dole, but would not fight petition, etc. for the right of others to vote if they’re intent is to steal from me because they outnumber me and want what others have… in fact, there is no class of people who I would agitate petition or fight for to have the right to vote, and some classes in particular where I think a high percentage of them should not have a vote because they are on the dole disloyal to the founding principles of the nation and intent on spending other peoples money and blood for their own narrow aims.

There are also those who would surrender liberty for security via voting for Frankenstein zombie candidates who could deliver neither and I wonder if they should have or deserve suffrage either.

I can work harder, burn the candle at both ends, still not get any enough sleep and be productive short term, or slow down, try to get more sleep and be productive for a longer period of time. I think that's more beneficial to the family.
Granted, I won't always be doing what others want me to, but I'll be doing what I think is best for the family fallible as that I may be.

If the mainstream media gushes accolades and compliments about somebody, particularly when they've passed away, you one might realize, consider or understand that it is the “occupation’s” propaganda, because they do this the opposite, (although they might be outwardly civil or polite) to people who really champion American values. Examples of the former would be Paul D. Wolfowitz who still alive, and Madeleine Albright who isn't.
The mainstream media is bought, sold and owned- hook line and sinker by the occupation, controlled fully by the sons of darkness, and used relentlessly to spread their profane world view and agenda.
They are the exact opposite, diametrically opposed and pursuing an action plan completely counter to the good parts of what the best intentions that the founding fathers were attempting to implement.

Terwijl ik me voorbereidde om nog een buis te begraven, denk ik bij mezelf: als het bedoeld is om gelezen te worden, dan heb ik mijn deel gedaan .

We are very much alike but I think your bell curves and ours are a bit different. Not greatly different but that X% difference is imo “material” enough to be considered… you may disagree and not believe in bell curves; having value, being real or being nothing more than racist, sexist pseudo-science etc. That’s fine and I don’t care to impose my beliefs on you but neither do I want your beliefs imposed on me.

Reminds me of a video on DEI that focused on how the NFL, NBA and NHL are competitive based and you Racial quotas.

It also reminds me of IQ test, which I agree are culturally biased, but they are biased in favor of modern society as opposed to Stone Age skills and qualities… i’m not sure that is wrong?

Starbucks on Mass. Avenue is voting to Union eyes unionize. Some of their demands seem reasonable to me but their spokesman said Starbucks is one of the few places where their many queer and trans workers can be treated well because they’re not respected at other companies. I wonder if respect can be legislated or must/should it be earned?

I think I should undoubtedly respect the opinions of my children. Listen to them, consider them and sometimes adapt them, but not all the time and not to defer to them completely and in some cases, not at all.

And the same applies to my wife and to a considerable, but somewhat lesser extent to other relatives

You may call it nepotism I call it nature and went and done with careful consideration and in moderation it may be it’s probably OK.

As I fill my water jug, there's a very large man behind me, stocking the shelves, and it makes me think that humans didn't primarily invent weapons to kill animals. They invented them to protect themselves from people. I wonder where it occurred first, but have no doubt it continued as hominoids migrated around the world.

We need a third-party. It doesn't have to be something in the middle and Luke warm. Bending over to clean the toilet, I don't go all the way down to the floor to get the base. Robin noticed that it was dirty about a year ago and I've done it a couple times since then, but can't do it every time. The radio Pastor said God can do anything. He raised Lazarus “after four days from a putrid grave.” I didn't know it was four days - that's a long time and I wonder if God can do that himself of course, or would he use others in which case exceptional medical breakthroughs may be possible too .

My arms are getting Harrier and it looked like they were turning blonde, but it's actually white - wow  .

Regarding freedom versus security, I heard a woman politician say that the ultimate goal is that we don't want any more's fault wars fought on our land. “Overseas is bad but it's better than over here”…and that's a little controversial.
Controversial may not be the right word it's a little bit selfish. Perhaps it is looking out for Americans first, but when I look at the havoc and destruction, we've been involved in directly or indirectly around the world I've got to question its value and wonder if the chickens will come home to roost we're creating we’ve created millions of people who don't like us and some who hate us perhaps many many.

If so, and so asked me if I would protect their right to vote, which is something I have no power to do anyway - not in the least, I would still ask what are your beliefs about the constitution etc., before answering.

I am constantly amazed at their intellect, but not necessarily at their wisdom. Not that I'm an expert on either one especially the ladder, but I do form opinions based on observations, etc.

"If you look at the various entities, some of them are there with the best intentions I'm sure but a lot of them are accepting this nonsense and bringing them back to the countries and trying to "affect change", in a way that is a sort of non-governmental central planning which is as bad as any other type of central planning when you have a handful of people who are trying to make decisions for the masses because they think they're better or smarter because they have more power. It's done very opaquely and then that gets pushed into the system. The other thing is that the WEF is very entrenched with the United Nations and one of the things in my book as I was researching all these different issues, the names that kept popping up again were WEF United Nations, and some others and at some point it's like Well OK maybe this is a coincidence but and so and over and over again, I don't believe that's coincidental… ESG is such a clear grab of power, wealth, and influence that by bringing all these key players who are influencing the choices of shareholders like you know, black rock, and Larry Fink, who is a really big person in terms of bringing you know from a world, economic forum discussion point and actually penetrating publicly traded companies now of course he's trying to distance himself but you know that in reality these things"… Carol Roth

Listening to the original version of Let's Work Together written by Wilbert Harrison at least I think it wad. It's been redone quite well by Canned Heat, George Thorogood and probably others but I really enjoy his version. Perhaps most of today's children will never experience a "good spanking" or spanking of any kind - not that it should be used to extremes and it shouldn't be severe. Going to church this morning, which is at least 50% black and talk to Robin this morning about Simone Biles and can't remember the other one, but I've had really bad experiences with Black growing up up. They seemed to really hate me most of them anyway and why would I think that that is not more genuine than the smiles I see on adults today? Just wondering.
Both sides both of us all of us need to be forgiving if this is going to work
I remember the other thing now it was the voice of black women. I told her I don't hear a sweetness, and now I think of what I do here is an insistence and demand and anger sometimes but that's just me that may not be what they are meaning, it might just be their pipes and the larger mouth.

They're pronounced physicality might be what I'm hearing not their intention Driving to church, I stopped at the light and quickly tried to turn media on to Bluetooth and to Apple tunes. The song I select after scanning a few is Roxette Listen to Your Heart now that voice to me is sweetness.
As with many other things in life when you drive, there are many moving parts there's a car in front of you the car behind you. There's the law there's consideration and utmost should be safety and if you obey the driving laws that will help.
And there's also road rage, so don't be aggressive watch out for the other driver in different ways
On the median, I think I see the same guy I saw last week again with the sign claiming certain things that I am not sure I believe and even if I do, I think he's part of a crew

The adult choir reminds me that Imo they frequently disintegrate into the same or worse; nepotism, corruption and cronyism as us. This is in no way meant to deny their humanity and love for one another.

Ethan preached on John 15:1-5
New International Version
The Vine and the Branches
15 “I am the true vine, and my Father is the gardener. 2 He cuts off every branch in me that bears no fruit, while every branch that does bear fruit he prunes[a] so that it will be even more fruitful. 3 You are already clean because of the word I have spoken to you. 4 Remain in me, as I also remain in you. No branch can bear fruit by itself; it must remain in the vine. Neither can you bear fruit unless you remain in me.
5 “I am the vine; you are the branches. If you remain in me and I in you, you will bear much fruit; apart from me you can do nothing.”

The pastor started with an anecdote about holding on to things too long, in this case his now to small wedding jacket which he tried on. Relatedly he said, “if I’m being honest”… That’s funny or not so funny. His message today is about “necessary endings”, and how they have to happen in our lives if we want God’s blessings,,, we need to have the courage to end things like relationships. It was an okay sermon but not great preaching and I want to hear great messages, not “okay preaching”… but that’s a tall order for any preacher.

He said, “Jesus is the only vine, without Him you will go through life hopeless and fruitless.” If true, peeps from other religious or spiritual traditions- look out.
“…A time to love, and a time to hate; a time of war, and a time of peace”… Ecclesiastes 3:8

Ecclesiastes
According to rabbinic tradition the book was written by King Solomon (reigned c. 970–931 BCE) in his old age,[2] but the presence of Persian loanwords and Aramaisms point to a date no earlier than about 450 BCE,[3] while the latest possible date for its composition is 180 BCE.[4]… Wikipedia.

Is He the God of the universe or a wise man? Are religions personality cults? Can I call Him my savior of if I mean my intermediary and conduit to the great unknown? If so, do I need the additional layers who claim to speak for Him, and must/should I ignore, decry, detest and seek to ignore or conquer all other versions of the truth and the way?

These Kratos sound like loyalty pledges, and that's what they are pledges to a higher master in this case being the god of the universe if that's truly the truth then it's fine if it's anything else then it's not much different than any king telling you what you better do
It's wonderful to appreciate everything. The good Lord has done for us if it is the good Lord demanding that. But if it's someone who's out to conquer the world. For one's own narrow Ames, then I've got to question it just the way I was brought up. I hope that isn't a terrible mistake. The terrible mistake you claim it is. And I don't think and I pray it's not rebellion against the God of the Multiverse
And being raised to have an inquiring mind is something I don't regret
It would be easier to process these things if there weren't things like religious wars, emperors, like Constantine and the evolution apparently of religions each barring from others while crying them simultaneously
Oddly or not in our 60s, we speak raunchier than ever while we do it. I think it's necessary in order to spice things up and Sparky each other or so it seems.
There are Pel curves, economic charts there are cycles and there are prophecies. Which of them are infallible. You tell me I would say maybe the self-fulfilling ones and that's not really valuable.

When Robin asked how I liked Ethan's message I said it was good and I guess the content was better than a delivery and the methodology used in Running late for my haircut I'm trying not to tailgate. It doesn't matter if I'm a little late I said 10 minutes to Maria on the phone. It'll probably be 15 with she might even understand. I don't owe the people in front of me anything other than not to tailgate and not to be so inconsiderate as to put enormous undue pressure on them to speed up… guess I'm channeling Wilbert Harrison's, "Let's work together… two or three minutes two or three hours. That doesn't mean their enemies aren't attempting to exploit those ethnic differences - they are and it may have a lot to do with the ability of those outsiders to infiltrate and sabotage Iran's central government, as to attempts to foment rebellion among Sunni Iranians and other religious minorities within Iran borders

She's gone to church. I'm listening to Allison sing I Know Who Holds Tomorrow and it reminds me that I don't need or at least don't want a pastor telling me what to do and talking in a funny voice like she said happened the other night at the women's conference a little too enthusiastically, even for her. The only intermediary/conduit to God I want is the man upstairs aka Jesus - I don't know if he was perfect or God of the universe, or multiverse - the Pharisees and most Jews didn't/don't

The scene where Harrison smashes the Colored Ladies Room sign never happened, as in real life Johnson refused to walk the extra distance to use the colored bathroom and, in her words, "just went to the white one."

"Is it historically accurate or just Hollywood magic? Welcome to MsMojo, and today we'll be counting down our picks for the Top 10 Things Hidden Figures Got Factually Right and Wrong. For this list, we'll be fact checking pivotal scenes and storylines from this 2016 drama. #10: The TimelineWRONG We can't fault them for this decision, because it made the movie move at a much more exciting pace, but the creators of the film condensed many years of history into quite a short timeline. The film kicks off in 1961 and takes place over the following two years. But in reality, Mary Jackson became the first black female engineer at NASA in 1958 and Dorothy Vaughan made history by becoming a supervisor more than a decade earlier, in 1949. All three of the women had many career successes earlier in history, including authoring research reports. In fact, the West and East Computer divisions didn't exist by the end of the 1950's.

#9: The Three Women's ClosenessWRONG This leads us to our next point. Because of the unrealistic timeline, the three main characters in the film, Mary Jackson, Katherine Johnson and Dorothy Vaughan, didn't actually cross paths as much as in the film. And they definitely weren't close friends who attended events for family milestones. This narrative change put the women together in a variety of scenarios where they actually wouldn't have worked together frequently. Emphasizing their closeness in the film let them express themselves to other women who were in a similar situation to themselves . . . but it's also not really true.
#8: The Police IncidentWRONG
Considering the fact that the three women weren't especially good friends, it should come as no surprise that they didn't actually carpool into work together. In one memorable scene from the film, we see them having car trouble and being questioned by a police officer when they break down on the side of the road. When he learns that they work for NASA however, he changes his tune, and expresses respect for them. All of this is fiction, and in fact Katherine Johnson carpooled with her neighbor and fellow churchgoer, Eunice Smith.

#7: Katherine Being Told Women Aren't Allowed in BriefingsRIGHT In a memorable scene from the movie, Katherine asks for permission to attend a space program briefing. She's told by head engineer Paul Stafford (played by Jim Parsons), that women don't go to meetings like that one, and that there is "no protocol for it". When she pushes harder, she's eventually allowed to attend. This is how it happened in real life, and Katherine recalls asking if there was a law against women appearing at the briefings. When she found out there wasn't, she managed to get her way.

#6: Kevin Costner's CharacterWRONG In the film, Kevin Costner plays Al Harrison, the director of the Space Task Group. But in reality, Harrison was not a real historical figure. The movie's director wasn't able to secure the rights to portray the real person he wanted to, so created a character who was a composite of three different NASA directors. Similarly, Jim Parsons' character Paul Stafford wasn't real, which is for the best considering his racist and sexist attitudes. Finally, the woman that Kirsten Dunst played, Vivian Mitchell, is also a fictional creation.
#5: Getting Rid of the Segregated ToiletWRONG
In one of the most satisfying moments in the movie, Kevin Costner's character dramatically smashes the sign for the "colored ladies" bathroom. There are a few problems with this scene . . . First, Kevin Costner's character didn't exist; and second, segregation ended at Langley in 1958. Some critics argued that this created an unnecessary "white savior" moment. The movie's screenwriter and director Theodore Melfi, countered that "There needs to be white people who do the right thing, there needs to be black people who do the right thing, and someone does the right thing. And so who cares who does the right thing, as long as the right thing is achieved?" The critics weren't impressed.

#4: Katherine Johnson Computing John Glenn's TrajectoryRIGHT
John Glenn's orbit of the Earth made history in 1962, when he became the first American to do so. In the movie, we see Katherine working on Glenn's trajectory, which was totally accurate. Perhaps more surprising though, is that when the IBM computer seemed to be giving them inconsistent numbers, Glenn really did ask for Johnson specifically to check the figures for him and said that he was willing to fly that day if she confirmed them. Margot Lee Shetterly, the author of the book "Hidden Figures", said, "So the astronaut who became a hero, looked to this black woman in the still-segregated South at the time as one of the key parts of making sure his mission would be a success."

#3: Katherine Running Half a Mile to Use the BathroomWRONG
One of the main devices used to expose the racism of mid-20th century America was the fact that Katherine Johnson had to walk half a mile to another building in order to use the colored bathroom. But in fact, it was Mary Jackson who encountered this problem, not Johnson. Both had started at Langley before the NACA [pronounced N - A - C- A] became NASA, which saw segregated facilities abolished. However, Katherine actually hadn't realized that the East Side bathrooms were segregated, and used the "white" bathroom for years. There was a complaint at one point, but she ignored it, and there were no consequences.
#2: Katherine's Experience with Workplace Racism WRONG
While in the movie, Katherine takes a stand against the segregation at NASA, the real Katherine has stated that racism didn't affect her much in her workplace. When she spoke to WHRO-TV, she said, "I didn't feel the segregation at NASA, because everyone there was doing research. You had a mission and you worked on it, and it was important to you to do your job ... and play bridge at lunch. I didn't feel any segregation. I knew it was there, but I didn't feel it." Perhaps to reflect practices elsewhere, and to make the movie more dramatic, the film creators included it anyway.

#1: Segregation Laws at LangleyRIGHT
In 1943, when black women began working as "computers" at Virginia's Langley campus, segregation was very real in the state. It was mandated that there be separate workspaces, cafeterias and bathrooms for black and white people. As "Hidden Figures" author Margot Lee Shetterly, describes it, "Even though they were just starting these brand new, very interesting jobs as professional mathematicians, they nonetheless had to abide by the state law." The reality is though that segregation ended at the Langley Research Center when NASA was formed in 1958, which was before the movie takes place.

You've done your best to re-write and control the narrative but fortunately others have kept records too - in paper, clay, stone, magnetics and ether. Jews plagiarized from the acadians who plagiarized from the Sumerians, Christians and Muslims plagiarize from the Jews, etc. apparently it's a human literary traducing that goes back to the dawn of time.

I would be unhappy if the emperor Constantine was my conduit to Jesus but I'm fine with Jesus being my conduit to God. Seems to me, the Emperor is our conduit based on the council of Nicaea and the influence he had and the book that he chose were allowed to be chosen and the book that he directed to be burnt and the authors that he threatened and possibly burnt along with them
The only way I could accept that would be if those books were so horrific and those accounts of Jesus life so horrific but they aren't. They make a lot of sense actually and in some cases more than the ones he chose. In my opinion anyway
So because of the emperors interference and the confusion there of perhaps about the actual life of Jesus, I have to come back to maybe he's a wise man maybe the wisest man ever and maybe much more but I still find it awfully hard to think that He is the God of the universe, although I accept that if that's what God decided, then it must be, but I will not accept it based on what Constantine allowed us "" to read

Of course, we are absolutely no picnic either caveat emptor
Bring me to the point we are like completely different
As I watered the plants, I give the lions share of the bucket to those that are producing vegetables check with the other ones. The grass is wet. I'm wearing sandals.
Living colors, Cult of Personality says I exploit you and you love me. I tell you one and one and one is three but the activist the other day said one and one makes three I guess they're talking about synergy.
In any case, both of them are using catchy phrases to get their point across or their view promoted
If somebody read my journal, they'd say this guy complains about everything, but I think that's what journaling is at least for some people. Other people have prayer books where they write wonderful things all the time, but I don't think they do them anymore than the rest of us. In both cases, it's therapeutic I've heard
The box, I'm still listening to Cult of Personality. They mentioned Gandhi Stalin and Kennedy. As usual, they're treating a subject with kid gloves

In our marriage, we try to keep things even Steven. I guess that's normal or OK or something
I've arrived at the church parking lot and I guess I'm taking too much time finding a place to park. The woman on my tail which she has the right to be because I am pretty slow has a mixed race child she fits in here. I don't add to it. She has two or at least she's looking after them
And despite them inventing time, they can't get there on time

“I, Ashurbanipal, king of the universe, king of the land of Ashur, whom Ashur and Ninlil endowed with supreme strength, the lions which I killed, I aimed the terrible bow of Ishtar, lady of battle, at them. I offered and offering over them. I poured a libation of wine over them”…

One of the cruelest kings in the history of the world, the above is only a minor example of his brutality.

“Today I am living …why have sickness and misery befallen me? I cannot do away with the strife in my country, dissension in my family… Illness of mind and flesh weighs me down… I bring my days to an end. The day of the festival, I am wretched, death is upon me and seizes upon me bringing me down with lamentation and groaning, I wail day and night”… Ashurbanipal (paraphrased.)

Michael Bloomberg hires half level to share his world view. They turn higher mid-level, who also embraced those fuse and they hire low level ex ex staffers, etc. also with their master.

The same can be said for FOX, which for decades, was led by Rupert and now by his children and who have also filled positions with underlings of their own ilk. Bloomberg and Murdoch might as well have been brothers or best friends, who when not stabbing people in the back were pursuing s similar agenda.

Watching Miranda Lambert and company singing I Got My Name Changed Back and marveling at their glitzy outfits it’s certainly understandable, entertaining, appealing or whatever when women wear these things - they have their reasons, but when I see a transvestite wearing them, I have to shake my head and try to be forgiving, understanding, or neutral, because they are posers and disruptors imo of a bad sort.

If Harris becomes president. I suppose her advisors/brain trust may very well be the neocons and the “people of color.” If Trump becomes president I suppose his will be neocons and the evangelicals. In both cases, the president will have the power to make the final decision… maybe.

Early colonization of America was most by the English a fairly homogeneous group intent on things like; profit, religious “freedom”, and conquest. Eventually that changed, slightly as other Europeans arrived. With open immigration starting in the 1970s? and massively increasing in 2000s different groups with different agendas arrived. Vice president Harris will represent most blacks who are supposedly 11% of the population, as well as other “disadvantaged” people and progressive whites. The associated agendas will take precedence over those of moderate and conservative whites. drive things as well. Me thinks America will become increasingly different than what the founders designed.

Our nation’s domestic and foreign policies are now controlled by several competing power blocks. I would say foreign policy, is mostly controlled by neocons and domestic policy mostly by progressives. Hopefully that these groups will not run the ship of state aground, sink it or get it blown to smithereens, both domestically and on the world stage, where nuclear war, which used to be a deterrent to war because of mutual assured destruction, but is now increasingly contemplated. At home the progressive agenda, may become an ultra-progressive agenda or it could be trumped by an ultra conservative authoritarian theocracy. Meanwhile, back at the farm - hundreds of millions of people from Central and South America might want to come across our open borders, not to mention hundreds of millions more from Africa, central Asia and even China. The occupation controlled media tells us this is a good thing.., my gut says it’s not.

The founding fathers were not intent on world domination. They were not fundamentalist Christians like many of America’s church today. Today there are more liberal conservative and fundamentalist and intent on bringing back. Jesus come hell or high water which means nuclear war is on the table for them and by extension for everyone… and don’t forget Zionism both Christian and Jewish these bedfellows are cooperating at the moment…

“Awakening Richard”, on YouTube is talking about unipolar powers and that the US is the first one to have unified pretty much the whole world. He said the closest comparison was the British empire and that the ancient ones such Rome and China were regional.
He also says the US uniPolar empire is lasting about three decades, as did the Chin dynasty, which was the first to unify China. He said the Chinese Chin? dynasty was so cruel that it was replaced by the Han dynasty. I just watched a show about Assyria and how they were so cruel, they were regional superpower, perhaps the first true military superpower, but eventually, they were destroyed utterly by their neighbors because of their cruelty. The United States cruelty, if you want to call it, that is via proxies - usually. That doesn't mean that it's not made enough enemies to bring it down.

Awakening Richard also talks about techniques used in past times by the British, French, Chinese, Russians, and now by the Americans, to create demand for their presence and interventions which are profitable.
One method was to redraw maps after their victories. Britain and France did it in the Middle East and Africa. Russia did it in Eastern Europe, where Ukraine possibly gained territory from; Hungary, Poland and Romania. Russia used mass deportation as did Assyria - also relocation of people like America with the continents natives, as well as coups and Palace intrigue to interfere with the governments of those countries. Eventually, these techniques tend to create a backlash, an angry violent one. He asked if humans are ready for a multi polar world and contrasts it with unipolar or a bipolar, which, according to him may have advantages… hmm. Meanwhile, back at the ranch, the Gaza gravedigger says the number of deaths is surpassing the places left to bury them… I wouldn't be surprised if you say that's misinformation. % the dead cry out from their graves.

If lions didn't have manes, they would probably lose more fights to tigers, but they do. A tiger is a lone hunter which fights tigers and might fight Bears. The lion is mostly a fighter of other lions and hyenas, mostly leaving hunting to the females. On a related note, why is it that the fight videos seem to show male lions and tigers fighting each other? It would be interesting to know how female lions and tigers would do in fights with each other, but it would be cruel to stage them, so please don't.

I remember the politician saying it's better to fight them over there than over here which is selfish but not surprising… maybe it's human Nature. I think we would be better if forced to fight "them", to do so when they approach or enter our territorial waters. If we have an incredibly robust defense, few would make it to our shores over here on a ship so that the few that do we would decimate and they might never try again

Actually, I can move pretty fast, but I'm inclined to have accidents when I do
As I rounded the corner to make that right turn on the red light I heard somebody else and hey hey hey hey it didn't register until I was all around and in my rearview mirror I saw a jogger. Jesus said something about loving our enemies and I guess wishing them well and I think that makes sense on a number of levels, spiritual and otherwise because if everyone's doing well, maybe they'll leave each other alone

As I turned the corner on County Road, 900 E. I see cars waiting at the light young women. Their hair must've been brushed this morning, etc..

That's nice.
The doctors appointment with Advent Nose went about as expected not any better that's for sure. Heard the same old stuff but may have picked up a tip or two that will be helpful. Don't think I'll do the CT scan. Don't want the radiation had one year ago and she took a pretty good look up my nose with her instruments.
Driving home from the appointment told Ross, Kayla and Robin. I'd be there by 10 and they couple of them replied with the like or Love, which makes me take my eyes off the road momentarily now it's beeped again, but with the glare I can't see it and it makes me think I shouldn't even look after all. I'm mostly looking in hopes that I received an order and that hasn't happened via text ever.
But also get notifications for emails, so I guess it could happen but I shouldn't be taking my eyes off the road better to Mrs. Cell and have an accident
Of course, most of these notifications are spam junk or advertisements. I've turned most of them off, and I'll keep working on getting rid of more. The heck with Facebook Gmail, Google and ads. They're sure not doing me any good they're just causing people to crash. To make the oligarchs richer

Whether they should be rewarded or punished for what their ancestors did is debatable to me at least because throughout history of unkind, such people have been benefited and rewarded. Now we want to change what I would say is just give everyone an equal shot no matter how they got here unless it's been illegal in the past 30 to 50 years.
There's nothing wrong with changing the rules so that people don't benefit from misdeeds, but since everyone has benefited from or been involved in it or at least every society and every demographic to suddenly pick winter winners solely because they are descended from impressed peoples is not the right thing to do

If you don't believe there are any differences between the genders or human populations, then the following is irrelevant. I think there are differences and wonder if they will ever change, or are they a bit too hardwired to? Maybe maybe not because we have freedom of choice even if we have to keep it under wraps sometimes. Society will change, roles may change well they certainly are changing. So if they exist, how will gender and population differences affect; adjustments, influences and adaptation to changing societal roles and technologies? If/since you don't think there are differences it doesn't matter… except you probably don't like me and us, and will continue to blame us for everything.

The man on TV is saying that the political generals do with the party wants them to do and the generals who fight wars may have different opinions, but rank, etc. is increasingly dependent on one's political affiliations and advanced degrees which probably has become politicized unfortunately. Throw in the military industrial complexes financial incentives and you have the potential for a real melee. Something similar is happening with parenting - people who don't have children, but have advanced degrees from the " right schools", are telling people that have children how to raise them… and what to buy, which is likely to be their sponsors and grant providers products.

As the war in the Middle East heats up, I wonder about the 77,000 evangelists? I don’t really want to research it, well I do and the pastors don’t talk about such things, at least most of them don’t seem to. I wonder if prophecy is ironclad or self fulfilling and being fulfilled but in either case, the momentum is great and would be hard to stop

AI is a big deal, but we’ve already experienced Siri, which is a form of it and she has a mind of her own. Me thinks humans will always have at least half a chance against AI because I think peeps have God on our side. I doubt they AI does and I wonder who it does have?

Watching the German public broadcast service DW talking about Ukraine today about the incremental advances of the Russians against the fortifications of the Ukrainians, It seems that a well, determined Army can withstand a determined onslaught for a long time unless nukes or other horrific weapons are deployed against them.

A smart three or four-year-old who will eventually have an IQ of 120 530 is probably equipped to live in today society other than not being able to reach the gas pedal. He's smart enough to go down and pick up his welfare check if he so desires or if they institute universal income.
In fact, a three or four-year-old with an IQ of 90 or 100 might be able to pull it off and there's some adults that can't

Reading about the early church and the competing movements, the Arians, the Nestorians,

Eusebius of Caesarea (c. 260–340 AD), often called the "Father of Church History," was a Christian historian, theologian, and bishop. His beliefs were shaped by his role as a defender of Christianity during a period of intense persecution and theological development. Some key aspects of his beliefs include:

1. Defense of Christian Orthodoxy:
- Trinitarian Views: Eusebius's position on the nature of Christ and the Trinity is complex and was controversial. He was initially sympathetic to Arianism, a view that denied the full divinity of Christ, seeing Christ as a subordinate to God the Father. However, after the Council of Nicaea (325 AD), where the Arian controversy was addressed, Eusebius signed the Nicene Creed, affirming the belief in the full divinity of Christ, though it's debated how wholeheartedly he accepted it.
- He believed that Christ was the Logos (Word) of God and was crucial to creation, but in his earlier writings, he appeared to support the idea that the Logos had a subordinate relationship to the Father.

2. Historical Theology:
- Eusebius was deeply concerned with the preservation and promotion of the historical legitimacy of Christianity. His most famous work, Ecclesiastical History, traces the history of the Church from the time of Christ to his own era. He believed that God's providence guided the history of the Church, and he aimed to show how Christianity overcame persecution and heresy to flourish.

3. Support for Constantine and Christian Empire:

- Eusebius was a strong supporter of Constantine the Great, the first Roman emperor to convert to Christianity. He saw Constantine's conversion as a divine event, marking the beginning of a new Christian era. His writings portray Constantine as God's chosen instrument to establish a Christian empire. His Life of Constantine reflects this belief, portraying the emperor in a highly favorable light.

4. Biblical Canon and Scriptural Authority:
- Eusebius contributed to early discussions on the Christian biblical canon, especially in distinguishing between universally accepted books (like the Gospels) and disputed or non-canonical writings. He was influential in determining the list of books that would eventually become the New Testament.

5. Historical Providence:
- He believed that the history of the world, especially the Roman Empire, was divinely guided to prepare the way for Christianity. Eusebius argued that the rise of the Roman Empire facilitated the spread of Christianity and that the Pax Romana allowed the Christian message to travel and take root.

In summary, Eusebius believed in the providential role of history in supporting Christianity, defended the divinity of Christ (despite his early Arian leanings), supported the Christian empire under Constantine, and was instrumental in early discussions of the biblical canon.

Eusebius
Athanasius of Alexandria (c. 296–373 AD) was a pivotal figure in early Christian theology, best known for his defense of the orthodox understanding of the Trinity and his opposition to Arianism. His beliefs shaped the future of Christian doctrine, particularly regarding the nature of Christ and the Trinity. Some key aspects of his beliefs include:

1. Christ's Full Divinity (Anti-Arianism):
- Defender of Nicene Orthodoxy: Athanasius is most famous for his staunch defense of the Nicene Creed and its assertion that Christ is fully divine, being of the same essence (homoousios) as God the Father. He argued that Christ was co-eternal and co-equal with the Father, rejecting Arianism, which claimed that Christ was a created being and therefore not fully divine.

- Salvation through Christ's Divinity: Athanasius believed that only if Christ were fully divine could He truly offer salvation. According to Athanasius, humanity was trapped in sin and death, and only God Himself could restore life. Therefore, if Christ were not fully God, He would not have the power to redeem humanity. He famously wrote, "God became man so that man might become God" (On the Incarnation), meaning that through Christ, humans can be restored to communion with God.

2. The Doctrine of the Trinity:
- Athanasius was a key figure in articulating the Trinitarian doctrine as the co-equality of the Father, Son, and Holy Spirit. He argued that the three persons of the Trinity shared the same divine essence but were distinct in their persons. For Athanasius, any diminution of Christ’s divinity threatened the unity of the Godhead itself.
- He played a central role in defining the orthodox understanding of the Trinity at the First Council of Nicaea (325 AD) and in the decades-long struggle against Arianism that followed.

3. Incarnation and Redemption:
- In his seminal work On the Incarnation, Athanasius explained the central Christian belief that the Word (Logos) of God became flesh in the person of Jesus Christ. He taught that Christ’s incarnation was essential for human salvation because it allowed God to restore the image of God in humanity, which had been corrupted by sin.
- Through Christ’s death and resurrection, Athanasius argued, death itself was conquered, and humanity was offered eternal life.

4. The Role of the Holy Spirit:
- Athanasius also defended the divinity of the Holy Spirit, which became a point of controversy after the debate over Christ’s divinity. He argued that the Holy Spirit, like the Son, was of the same essence (homoousios) as the Father and the Son, playing a crucial role in the life of the believer and the Church.

- This belief was later codified in the Nicene-Constantinopolitan Creed (381 AD), which affirmed the full divinity of the Holy Spirit.

5. Asceticism and Holiness:
- Athanasius was also an advocate of asceticism, seeing the renunciation of worldly pleasures and the pursuit of holiness as central to the Christian life. His Life of Antony (a biography of the early Christian monk St. Anthony) was highly influential in promoting monasticism, especially in the Eastern Church. For Athanasius, ascetic practices were a way to imitate Christ's self-denial and draw closer to God.

6. Scriptural Authority:
- Athanasius played a significant role in defining the Christian biblical canon. In his 39th Festal Letter (367 AD), he listed the 27 books that make up the New Testament today, being one of the earliest known authorities to identify these texts as canon.
- He strongly emphasized the authority of Scripture in his theological arguments, using it as the foundation for his defense of the Nicene Creed and orthodox Christian beliefs.

7. Theological Perseverance:
- Despite facing numerous exiles and political opposition due to his anti-Arian stance, Athanasius never wavered in his defense of Nicene orthodoxy. He famously stood "against the world" (Athanasius contra mundum), resisting pressures from various emperors and church leaders who sought to promote Arianism or compromise with it.

Summary:
Athanasius believed in the full divinity of Christ and the Trinity, viewing Christ as co-equal and co-eternal with God the Father. His theology emphasized that salvation was only possible if Christ were truly God, as only God could redeem humanity. He was also a defender of the Holy Spirit's divinity, a promoter of asceticism, and an important figure in shaping the biblical canon. His unwavering defense of Nicene orthodoxy made him one of the most influential early Christian theologians.

“Nestorian Christians are followers of a theological doctrine attributed to Nestorius, a 5th-century Archbishop of Constantinople. Nestorianism became one of the early Christian theological controversies, focusing on the nature of Christ and his relationship between divinity and humanity. Nestorians hold distinctive views about the incarnation of Christ, and their beliefs led to a significant schism in the early Church. Key elements of Nestorianism and the Nestorian Church include:

1. Christological Beliefs:
- Nestorians emphasize the duality of Christ's nature—his divine and human natures. According to Nestorius, these two natures were not mixed or confused but existed side by side within the person of Jesus Christ. Nestorius argued that it was inappropriate to refer to Mary as the "Theotokos" (Greek for "God-bearer" or "Mother of God"), as was the practice in the Eastern Orthodox and Roman Catholic traditions. Instead, he preferred the term Christotokos ("Christ-bearer" or "Mother of Christ"), asserting that Mary was the mother of Christ's human nature, not his divine nature.

- Nestorianism was often understood as teaching that there were two persons in Christ, one divine and one human, rather than a single person with two natures. Nestorius himself denied this interpretation, but his views were perceived as downplaying Christ's unity as a single person, which led to significant opposition.

2. Condemnation and the Council of Ephesus (431 AD):
- Nestorius's views were condemned as heretical at the Council of Ephesus in 431 AD. The council affirmed that Christ was one person with two natures (divine and human) united in a single hypostasis, and it upheld the title of Mary as "Theotokos." This theological position became central to orthodox Christian belief, while Nestorianism was declared heresy.

- After the Council of Ephesus, Nestorius and his followers were marginalized within the Byzantine Church. Nestorius himself was deposed and exiled, and his teachings were rejected in much of the Roman Empire.

3. The Church of the East:
- After Nestorius's condemnation, many of his followers fled to the Sassanian Persian Empire, where they established what became known as the Church of the East, sometimes referred to as the Nestorian Church (although they do not use that term themselves). This church rejected the decisions of the Council of Ephesus and continued to adhere to the teachings associated with Nestorius.

- The Church of the East thrived outside the boundaries of the Roman Empire, especially in Persia, India, Central Asia, and later China. It became one of the largest Christian churches in the East during the early medieval period. Missionaries from the Church of the East spread Christianity as far as China (where they were known as Jingjiao, or the "Luminous Religion") and India (where they are known as Thomas Christians).

4. Key Beliefs and Practices:
- Christology: The most defining characteristic of Nestorianism is its understanding of Christ as having two distinct natures—one divine and one human. This view leads to an emphasis on the distinction between Christ's divinity and his humanity, while also affirming that these natures work in harmony in the person of Jesus Christ.

- Sacramental Life: The Church of the East developed its own liturgical and sacramental traditions, similar to other Eastern Christian churches but distinct in many ways. It uses Syriac, a dialect of Aramaic, in its liturgy.

- Mariology: The rejection of the title "Theotokos" for Mary is a key distinction from other branches of Christianity. The Nestorian

Christians honor Mary but emphasize her role as the mother of Christ's human nature, rather than the divine Logos.

5. Modern Nestorianism:
- The Assyrian Church of the East is the modern continuation of the ancient Nestorian tradition. Although they do not refer to themselves as "Nestorian" and consider the label to be a misrepresentation, the Assyrian Church of the East retains many theological elements associated with Nestorianism.

- Today, the Assyrian Church of the East has communities in the Middle East, India, and the diaspora, particularly in the United States and Australia, due to the migration of Assyrian Christians from Iraq and surrounding regions.

- The church has engaged in ecumenical dialogues with other Christian traditions in recent years, and while it maintains its unique Christological perspective, efforts have been made to clarify misunderstandings and reduce theological tensions with other churches.
Summary:
Nestorian Christians, historically associated with the teachings of Nestorius, emphasize the distinction between Christ's human and divine natures, rejecting the title "Mother of God" for Mary. Condemned as heretical by the Council of Ephesus in 431 AD, their followers formed the Church of the East, which…(chatGPT ended it here abruptly)

Ipuwer Papyrus:
“In the poem, Ipuwer – a name typical of the period 1850–1450 BCE – complains that the world has been turned upside-down: a woman who had not a single box now owns furniture, a girl who used to look at her face in the water now has a mirror, while the once-rich man is now in rags. He demands that the Lord of All (a title which could refer to either the king or the creator sun-god) destroy his enemies and remember his religious duties. This is followed by a vivid description of the disorders: there is no longer any respect for the law and even the king's burial inside the pyramid has been desecrated. The story continues with the recalling of better days until it abruptly ends due to the missing final part of the papyrus. It is likely that the poem concluded with a reply of the Lord of All, or prophesying the coming of a powerful king who would restore order.[1][4][5]”…
“The Ipuwer Papyrus has been dated no earlier than the Nineteenth

Dynasty, around 1250 BCE[1][6] but the text itself is much older, and dated back no earlier than the late Twelfth Dynasty of the Egyptian Middle Kingdom.[2] The Admonitions is considered the world's earliest known treatise on political ethics, suggesting that a good king is one who controls unjust officials, thus carrying out the will of the gods.[7] It is a textual lamentation, close to SumerianCity Laments and to Egyptian laments for the dead, using the past (the destruction of Memphis at the end of the Old Kingdom) as a gloomy backdrop to an ideal future.[8]
It was previously thought that the Admonitions of Ipuwer presents an objective portrait of Egypt in the First Intermediate Period.[4][5][9] In more recent times, it was found that the Admonitions, along with the Complaints of Khakheperraseneb, are most likely works of royal propaganda, both inspired by the earlier Prophecy of Neferti: the three compositions have in common the theme of a nation that has been plunged into chaos and disarray and the need for an intransigent king who would defeat chaos and restore maat.[10] Toby Wilkinson suggested that the Admonitions and Khakheperresenb may thus have been composed during the reign of Senusret III, a pharaoh well known for his use of propaganda.[10] Ian Shaw does not consider the Admonitions to be a reliable account of early Egyptian history, because of the long time interval between its original composition and the writing of the Leiden Papyrus.[6]"..,
"Ipuwer and the Book of Exodus…
Ipuwer has often been put forward in popular literature as confirmation of the biblical account of the Exodus, most notably because of its statement that "the river is blood" and its frequent references to servants running away. This assertion has not gained acceptance among the majority of scholars. There are disparities between Ipuwer and the narrative in the Book of Exodus, such as that the papyrus describes the Asiatics as arriving in Egypt rather than leaving. The papyrus' statement that the "river is blood" phrase may refer to the red sediment colouring the Nile during disastrous floods, or simply be a poetic image of turmoil.[11]…

(Currently this article is a stub) The translation and/or a link to the content of the Papyrus is conspicuously missing while everything that is listed is speculation. I would suggest simply listing the text and let it speak for itself.

• Where is the papyrus currently? see below at official name
• What is Ipuwer (personal name, place name...)?
• Who is Jon Van Seters?
• Is there disagreement about the interpretation of the papyrus?
• Anyone have a picture of the papyrus that we can use?
I have provided the Van Seters reference (his credentials will not be easy to obtain). There seem to be alternative views on its placement in history. Ipuwer seems to be the narrator.
I could not find a picture for GFDL use.
There are many online sources discussing its interpretation, but I had not the time to find out an authoratitive view from an established Egyptologist. JFW | T@lk 18:09, 8 November 2005 (UTC)

Ramses II not the Pharaoh of the Exodus
Latest comment: 18 years agoRamses II had a long and prosperous reign. There is not the slightest documentary or archaeological evidence that he drowned in the sea, or that he had to deal with anything like the Plagues of Egypt or a massive slave revolt.
• The only evidence that ties Ramses to the Exodus is the statement in Exodus 1:11 that Pharaoh forced the Israelites to build the city of Raamses. However, archaeologists know very well that this was built c.1720 BC, 500 years before Ramses II, and the megalomaniac Ramses II changed the name to his own. Thus, Exodus 1:11 is evidence against Ramses II as Pharaoh of the Exodus.Das Baz 15:46, 18 September 2006 (UTC)

Fiction based on Fiction?

If the Biblical account of the Exodus is fiction, and Ipuwer is fiction, there could still be a connection between the two. Fiction writers do borrow from each other. But if one of the two is historical, chances are good that the other one also is historical. Das Baz, aka Erudil 17:37, 11 September 2009 (UTC)

Hi, while the article mainly talks about the exodus, the importance of this papyrus is certainly not its relevance to that! Cheers! 213.39.210.112 (talk) 22:01, 12 January 2010 (UTC)
Update: Talk of Ipuwer/Exodus parallel is now only 1/3 of the content and can hardly be construed as giving undue weight to a positive match. Quite the contrary. The comparison table is provided to clarify to the reader what scholars are looking at and considering after it is stated in the article that they do not support the belief that the two texts in question are describing the self-same event, based mainly on dating and not so much a face-value reading of the texts. That textual parallels on its face do exist is not debated among scholars. See Enmarch's "The reception of a Middle Egyptian poem" for instance.
It's not so much that the Ipuwer/Exodus comparison is too large, but that the other sections may need more information provided. Maybe you can remedy this by contributing sourced material rather than resorting to censorship of other sections in some kind of ham-handed, Marxist policy? 97.106.241.66 (talk) 05:47, 23 June 2010 (UTC)

Prophetic Theme

Again we have large section that seems over-emphasised, especially as it references two writers who wrote almost a century ago. Comments? Dougweller (talk) 16:04, 18 June 2010 (UTC)
Not exactly. Its prophetic nature is sort of the whole point and purpose of the text. Breasted may be dated, but his work is still highly respected, quoted, and referenced in academic circles. What is sorely missing, however, is the political context of the text. Parkinson (2002) and Simpson (1972) explain it as thus, which I paraphrase in my featured article Ancient Egyptian literature: In Ipuwer, a sage addresses an unnamed king and his attendants, describing the miserable state of the land, which he blames on the king's inability to uphold royal virtues. This can be seen either as a warning to kings or as a legitimization of the current dynasty, contrasting it with the supposedly turbulent period that preceded it. Since this is a Twelfth Dynasty text (although surviving only from a Nineteenth Dynasty copy), the turbulent period described is the First Intermediate Period, which is mentioned in the article, but, again, lacks context.--Pericles of AthensTalk16:45, 18 June 2010 (UTC)

Ok. What we shouldn't have is an attempt to make Breasted more important by harping on this 'Dean of Egyptology' thing. I agree about the lack of context. This article would never pass muster in any scholarly forum. Dougweller (talk) 21:09, 18 June 2010 (UTC)
Right. Breasted, although having scholarly credibility, is nonetheless quite dated, so there should be some recent input backing his assertions, preferably from a university press source. I find the enormous focus on the biblical Exodus to be a bit unbecoming for any serious encyclopedia entry on an ancient Egyptian papyrus text.--Pericles of AthensTalk 00:04, 19 June 2010 (UTC)

“ is the Lord’s prayer based on a psalm?” —- “The Lord’s Prayer, as found in the New Testament (Matthew 6:9-13 and Luke 11:2-4), is not directly based on any specific psalm, though it shares themes with many psalms. Psalms often express dependence on God, seek His forgiveness, and ask for guidance and protection—elements present in the Lord’s Prayer.

While the Lord’s Prayer reflects broader Jewish prayer traditions, including those found in the Psalms, it is a unique composition by Jesus. For example:

• “Give us this day our daily bread” (Matthew 6:11) reflects reliance on God, similar to Psalms like Psalm 23:1, “The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want.”
• “Forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors” (Matthew 6:12) has parallels to the penitential tone of Psalm 51, which asks for forgiveness and mercy.

Thus, while not directly based on a single psalm, the Lord’s Prayer echoes themes of trust, petition, and worship that are common in the Psalms”… chatGPT

"Lorenzo Negro's archaeological work in Jericho has not provided definitive evidence to confirm the biblical narrative that the Israelites destroyed the city, as described in the Book of Joshua. This account, which claims that the Israelites, led by Joshua, marched around the city for seven days and caused its walls to fall, is part of the religious tradition, but it remains a debated topic in archaeology. Negro's excavations, like those of other archaeologists, have focused on uncovering the layers of Jericho's history, including its periods of destruction and rebuilding. However, the connection between these events and the biblical account is not clearly established by the archaeological evidence.

Previous excavations in Jericho, notably those of British archaeologist Kathleen Kenyon in the 1950s, found that the walls of Jericho had already been destroyed around 1550 BCE, which is much earlier than the traditional biblical timeline for the Israelite conquest, which is often dated to the late Bronze Age (around 1200 BCE). This gap in timing has led many scholars to question whether the biblical story reflects a historical event.
Lorenzo Negro's findings have contributed to a broader understanding of Jericho's history, but they have not confirmed the destruction of Jericho by the Israelites as described in the Bible. The question remains unresolved in archaeological circles, with some scholars suggesting the story may be symbolic or based on different events"… chatGPT

Yesterday, the baby sort of invited me to go to their church, and I would prefer it to our church based on a number of things, the most recent being the Sunday after the pager and cell phone attacks throughout the Middle East, the preacher, our bishop alluded in my opinion once or twice to blowing off heads being necessary, sometimes. I think he may have been talking about David cutting off Goliath's head. Goliath was a Philistine and he may equate Philistines with Palestinians. I'm not sure but they may not preach the same message at the other church. The message again reminds me that after 911 and mass surveillance allegedly began of our communications via;; email, telephone, googling, Facebook, texting etc, that as long as we weren't doing anything we "wrong", we had nothing to worry about. I'm told that fluoride severely negatively impacts intelligence, but it's not intelligence alone that leads to success. It also requires diligence, hard work and learning useful things and skills that combination be nature or nurture usually leads to success.

On the flipside human nature is about the same no matter what the IQ is and sadly the most intelligent people in the world are therefore inclined to use their smart selfishly. This goes individuals and yes, ethnic groups as well. That doesn't mean that low IQ people can't play the same games, and they often do.

Jude 14-15
New International Version
14 Enoch, the seventh from Adam, prophesied about them: "See, the Lord is coming with thousands upon thousands of his holy ones 15 to judge everyone, and to convict all of them of all the ungodly acts they have committed in their ungodliness, and of all the defiant words ungodly sinners have spoken against him."

What is the meaning of Jude 1 14 15?
The quote from Jude in verses 14-15 seems to be a reference to coming judgement and lines up with Revelation 19:11-21. Jesus is coming back with a host from heaven to judge the wicked together with Satan and his cohorts. Satan's doom has be sealed from ancient times.

Revelation 19:11-21
New International Version
The Heavenly Warrior Defeats the Beast
11 I saw heaven standing open and there before me was a white horse, whose rider is called Faithful and True. With justice he judges and wages war. 12 His eyes are like blazing fire, and on his head are many crowns. He has a name written on him that no one knows but he himself. 13 He is dressed in a robe dipped in blood, and his name is the Word of God.
14 The armies of heaven were following him, riding on white horses and dressed in fine linen, white and clean. 15 Coming out of his mouth is a sharp sword with which to strike downthe nations. “He will rule them with an iron scepter.”[a] He treads the winepress of the fury of the wrath of God Almighty. 16 On his robe and on his thigh he has this name written: king of kings and lord of lords.
17 And I saw an angel standing in the sun, who cried in a loud voice to all the birds flying in midair, “Come, gather together for the great supper of God, 18 so that you may eat the flesh of kings, generals, and the mighty, of horses and their riders, and the flesh of all people, free and slave, great and small.”
19 Then I saw the beast and the kings of the earthand their armies gathered together to wage war against the rider on the horse and his army.20 But the beast was captured, and with it the false prophet who had performed the signs on its behalf. With these signs he had deluded those who had received the mark of the beast and worshiped its image. The two of them were thrown alive into the fiery lake of burning sulfur.21 The rest were killed with the sword coming out of the mouth of the rider on the horse, and all the birds gorged themselves on their flesh.

esteem…That's expecting too much.

Just heard something on the radio that rings true the man said someone's opinion is not less important, it's "unimportant." In my case what I believe isn't considered less or unimportant it's considered counter-important by some or many. What I consider a priority doesn't even rate as less important, or "unimportant, it seems to be considered counter/important and subject to cancellation… that's okay, I should no more blame her for that, then blame her if she had taken our kid and moved out of state on me…the religious one is based on American society and the latter on American law… and you go to war with the weapons you have.
It sounds like bemoaning but I don't care about getting the last laugh…just hope this enters the historical record so in a couple hundred years people can read what Joe and Jany six packs lives were like.

The Aramaic Enoch Scroll is a non-published, complete copy of the Book of Enoch which is rumored to be in possession of private investors.

Qumran
There is no proof of its existence, but according to the former chief editor of the official Dead Sea Scrolls editorial team, John Strugnell (1930 - 2007), the scroll is well preserved, and microfilmed. Strugnell said that he was shown the microfilm in 1990, during the Kuwait crisis, but he was never able to buy it for the editorial team.[1]

Qumran Cave 11

Former Dead Sea Scrolls editor John Strugnell working in the "Scrollery"
According to Strugnell, the scroll was found in the Qumran "Cave 11", in 1956, together with the other, already publicized scrolls and fragments. This cave was found by the same Bedouin, Abu Dahoud, who found the first cave in 1947.[2]
Apart from this and another scroll from Cave 11 that he claimed to have seen, Strugnell had heard Gerald Lankester Harding, the director of Jordan's Department of Antiquities (1936–1956), speak of at least two, never-published scrolls from the same find. These, or some of them, were at that time (the Kuwait crisis) about to be bought by private, probably European collectors or bankers. The reason for buying them was for investments. Although Strugnell had arrangements with serious buyers who would publicize the scrolls, he was not able to convince the owners to sell.[1][3]
It was was reportedly discovered in Dead Sea cave 11 by an Arab Bedouin boy named Abu Dahoud called Mohamed el-Dib which means Muhammed the Wolf… he is also the boy that discovered Dead Sea cave number one.

King James and the Emperor Constantine had something in common. They both had some influence if not a lot over who the translators or compilers of their Bibles were, and as such, they may have had some influence on its contents. Constantine came first canonized the Bible King James may have influenced the most lively web, read English version of the Bible and I surmise they both had agendas of one kind or another.

The Bible of Emperor Constantine and the King James Bible share many core elements but differ in language, structure, and historical context. Here are the key differences:
1. Language:• Constantine’s Bible: Likely based on Greek manuscripts, as Greek was the language of the Eastern Roman Empire.
• King James Bible: Written in early modern English, translated directly from Hebrew and Greek texts.
2. Historical Context and Canon:• Constantine’s Bible (4th century): Emperor Constantine commissioned fifty Bibles for the early Christian church. These Bibles likely resembled the Greek Septuagint (the Old Testament in Greek) and early versions of the New Testament. The canon (books included) wasn't fully standardized, so some books in Constantine's Bible might differ from later Bibles.

• King James Bible (1611): Commissioned by King James I of England. By then, the Christian canon was more established. This Bible included the Old and New Testaments, following the Protestant canon, and originally included the Apocrypha, though later editions often omitted it.
3. Translation and Textual Variance:
• Constantine's Bible: Based on early Greek manuscripts, possibly including readings from different textual traditions.
• King James Bible: Primarily based on the Textus Receptus (Greek New Testament) and the Masoretic Text (Hebrew Old Testament).
In essence, they both include the foundational books of the Christian faith, but the King James Bible is a refined, English-translated version created over a thousand years after Constantine's era"… chatGPT

Democracy doesn’t bring equality, believe that much.

I don’t love Lincoln. He wanted a powerful central government where elites would make decisions for everyone. The problem is everyone isn’t the same and states aren’t the same and weren’t the same then. A government that forces everyone to be the same will always be wrong but will always be powerful, and that is the problem for colonies And outliers… on the other hand, a powerful central government can provide a national defense, but in reality, it often develops an appetite for empire.

My friends and relatives mostly adhere and strictly comply with their religious leaders and theologies. I have no complaints about that except when it leads to voting for or endorsing religious wars, which is what so many of them are seem to be

Listening to the gubernatorial debate this evening, I realize more than ever that people of any gender or ethnicity could be who I vote for, but I may be more likely to vote for somebody who is more similar to me than the others, and I wouldn't be surprised if the same holds true of many people
The fact seems to be that those who are more like me are more likely to have similar values, but if people who are unlike me share my values and I share theirs we’d probably get along

I think Churchhill quote about the first casualty of war being the truth is playing out in Ukraine. We mostly see what Ukraine tells us that's what our news report after all. They're the same milk, but fax underground the cities that have fallen, etc. show time and a time after time that these are lies Israel versus Hamas, Iran and Hasbulla and Hootie, etc. may be another story because Israel has the US backing it apparently 99.9% so it has the upper hand Ukraine does not.
And in the books canonize by Athanas Constantine found the ideal religion to control. The people give them a guarantee of eternal life, but in addition to that carrot propose a terrible stick, a.k.a. eternal damnation if they didn't go along with the program and for those thinkers of the time who didn't the consequences were die books burned people killed.

It's the system that is held sway for almost 2000 years and the average American still is on that wagon
Why wouldn't they be?
I have no more insight into the nature of Jesus than CS Lewis had, nor do I think many other people do, nor do I think that he had great insight…I think he just had a great quote, that orthodoxy and peer pressure have made difficult to examine much less challenge.

Thinking about the; universe, multiverse, verses about powers and principalities in the heavens and the quote about us being a species with amnesia. The Hindus, Jews, Sumerians, Aztecs and others claim to have had; encounters, relationships and visitations from celestial extraterrestrial beings (Anunnaki, Quetzalcoatl, Zeus? Etc.),and some of these religions claim there's was with gods, or with the true God of the universe. Are the Jews and Christians correct that only their God is; good, genuine and almighty, and that any other such claimants are evil and Satanic? % And is the God of the Bible, also the God of the infinite and timeless multiverse? I hate to say it, but it begs the question what if they go to the Bible is just another competing celestial extraterrestrial being? After all He (Yahweh?), supposedly strangely spoke to Moses from behind a burning bush, may have wrestled with Jacob, and there might have been equally odd encounters with Enoch and others that to some people like me make it sound like the God of the Bible isn't that different than the other powers and principalities battling for our souls. And if this is the case assembly, I would call these extraterrestrials supernatural, but not divine - that I would reserve the God of the Multiverse not this shocking to be the Almighty of our realm. Add to that the atrocious behavior of many of his earthly minions who've committed genocide, etc., and you I've just got to scratch your my head… but what do I know? I am just conjecturing.

"Yahweh[a] was an ancient Levantinedeity, the national god of the Israelitekingdoms of Israel and Judah.[4][5]Though no consensus exists regarding the deity's origins,[6] scholars generally contend that Yahweh is associated with Seir, Edom, Paran and Teman,[7] and later with Canaan. The origins of his worship reach at least to the early Iron Age, and likely to the Late Bronze Age, if not somewhat earlier.[8] Although the religion of Israelites was polytheisticprior to the Babylonian captivity,[b] the deity of Yahweh later evolved into the concepts of God in Judaism and Samaritanism, which are strictly monotheistic."… https://en.m.wikipedia.org/wiki/Yahweh

And I watched Lisa Abramowitz on Bloomberg. I am thinking about the YouTube. I watched earlier about why beautiful women are crazy and the gist of it was that they are never told the truth so they are out of touch with reality. I generally don't agree with that and he Uses some of the usual descriptors like women are called crazy but we generally deserve the words assholes and jerks for men. I would say there's a bell curve for both of those things, but there's also some validity to this statement and I suppose they may be evolutionary adaptations for survival of the species and survival physically and Psychologically of the individualI. I think women know the truth anyway, I saw another YouTube video that said this is the greatest fear and it do with what someone would consider the truth. I heard beautiful woman say yes all girls are a little crazy but there's so much I don't know there have been some wrong things I have advised my daughter, I believe my intentions were reasonable, but I took my cues from an article from a magazine or something in San Francisco where she was living, which should have some credibility, but it didn't as far as I know although it wasn't entirely wrong… yeah enough people right about this and I don't have to get heavily involved. If you want to know what women think talk first and foremost to them, but take it with a gram song. I'm not sorry to say that it would apply to asking men what they think about men too.% Male and female realities may differ.

Deuteronomy 28:4 says, "Blessed shall be the fruit of your womb, the fruit of your ground, and the fruit of your cattle, the increase of your herds and the young of your flock".

Compare this with:

Deuteronomy 28:43 The foreigners who reside among you will rise above you higher and higher, but you will sink lower and lower. 44 They will lend to you, but you will not lend to them. They will be the head, but you will be the tail.
45 All these curses will come on you. They will pursue you and overtake you until you are destroyed, because you did not obey the Lordyour God and observe the commands and decrees he gave you."

“The Book of Jubilees, also known as Lesser Genesis, is an ancient Jewish text that retells the events of Genesis and part of Exodus, often with added details and interpretations. It’s structured as a series of revelations given to Moses by angels on Mount Sinai, recounting world history from creation up to the arrival of the Israelites at the Promised Land. Here are some of the main themes and features:
1. Chronology in Jubilees: The book organizes events in “jubilees” (periods of 49 years, or seven cycles of seven years). It uses this structure to give a precise timeline of biblical events.
2. Retelling of Genesis and Exodus: It follows many of the stories from Genesis (like the creation, the flood, the lives of the patriarchs) and Exodus, but with unique interpretations and additional details. For example, it gives an expanded account of the lives of Adam and Eve and introduces more background on other figures like Enoch and Noah.
3. Emphasis on Law and Purity: The book stresses the observance of laws, especially Sabbath observance, purity laws, and other practices that align with later Jewish tradition. It suggests that these laws were given to humanity at creation, long before Moses.
4. Angels and Heavenly Beings: It presents a greater role for angels and heavenly beings than the canonical Bible, with angels often acting as intermediaries or delivering messages.
5. Ethical and Cultural Commentary: Jubilees sometimes includes commentary on cultural practices or nations, giving insight into Jewish views at the time regarding surrounding cultures.
The Book of Jubilees is part of the Ethiopian Orthodox Church’s biblical canon but is not included in the standard Jewish or Christian Bibles. However, it was highly regarded among some Jewish sects and was found among the Dead Sea Scrolls, indicating its significance in early Jewish thought”… ChatGPT

“A vow is a more serious and solemn promise than a promise, and it involves greater accountability. Here are some differences between vows and promises”… safari AI
Does the Bible say we should not make Bowser vows or promises?
Yes, the Bible generally advises caution around making vows or promises. While it does not entirely forbid making them, it emphasizes the seriousness of keeping them and encourages a simple, honest approach in communication. Here are some key passages:
• Matthew 5:33-37: Jesus says, “Again, you have heard that it was said to the people long ago, ‘Do not break your oath, but fulfill to the Lord the vows you have made.’ But I tell you, do not swear an oath at all… All you need to say is simply ‘Yes’ or ‘No’; anything beyond this comes from the evil one.” Jesus emphasizes that honesty and integrity should come naturally, without the need for oaths.
• James 5:12: James advises, “Above all, my brothers and sisters, do not swear—not by heaven or by earth or by anything else. All you need to say is a simple ‘Yes’ or ‘No.’ Otherwise, you will be condemned.” This verse echoes Jesus’ teaching, promoting straightforward honesty over oaths.
• Ecclesiastes 5:4-5: “When you make a vow to God, do not delay to fulfill it. He has no pleasure in fools; fulfill your vow. It is better not to make a vow than to make one and not fulfill it.” This Old Testament verse warns against making vows rashly and stresses the importance of fulfilling them if made.

While the Bible doesn’t completely prohibit vows or promises, it emphasizes that they should not be made lightly. Instead, a person’s word should be dependable without needing extra affirmations”… safari AI

Trump allies like Steve Bannon admit Project 2025 is the real agenda and that now they can admit it…

What is the basic outline of project 2025?
“The basic outline for “Project 2025” refers to an initiative by the Heritage Foundation and other conservative think tanks, aiming to reshape U.S. federal government structures and policies if a conservative administration takes office. The plan focuses on reducing the size of the federal government, cutting back regulations, and rolling back progressive policies. Here’s a breakdown of some key elements: 1. Restructuring Federal Agencies: Project 2025 proposes a significant overhaul of agencies like the EPA, Department of Education, and IRS, aiming to reduce regulatory power, limit bureaucracy, and streamline departments.
2. Deregulation: The project emphasizes reducing federal regulations in sectors like energy, environment, and finance to boost economic growth and reduce government interventi3. Personnel Changes: A central component involves staffing changes, aiming to replace career bureaucrats with politically appointed officials who align with conservative values.
4. Judicial and Policy Reforms: The project supports appointing judges and implementing policies that uphold conservative constitutional interpretations, particularly on issues like the Second Amendment and abortion.
5. Energy Independence: Emphasizing energy independence through support for oil, gas, and coal production, the initiative seeks to reduce reliance on renewable energy mandates.
6. Defense and Foreign Policy: Project 2025 calls for strengthening the U.S. military, reinforcing border security, and promoting foreign policies that prioritize American interests.

The overall objective of Project 2025 is to bring sweeping changes that would align the federal government more closely with conservative ideologies and reduce the federal footprint on various policy areas”…ChatGPT

What is the basic outline of project 2025?
Project 2025 is a conservative blueprint for a second Trump administration, developed by the Heritage Foundation. It outlines a comprehensive plan for restructuring the federal government and implementing conservative policies across various sectors.

Key components of Project 2025 include:
* Policy Guide: A detailed policy document outlining the conservative agenda for the next administration.
* Personnel Database: A database of potential candidates for government positions.
* Presidential Administration Academy: Training programs for potential appointees.
* 180-Day Playbook: A roadmap for implementing key policy changes within the first 180 days of the administration.
Core policy goals of Project 2025:
* Restoring the family as the centerpiece of American life.
* Dismantling the administrative state.
* Defending the nation's sovereignty and borders.
* Securing God-given individual rights to live freely.
Specific policy proposals within Project 2025 include:
* Gutting abortion access: Severely limiting abortion access nationwide by reversing the FDA's approval of mifepristone and reviving the Comstock Act.
* Mass deportations: Implementing stricter immigration policies and increasing deportations.
* Abusing warrantless surveillance: Expanding government surveillance powers.
* Unleashing undue force on protestors: Suppressing dissent and protests.
* Severely limiting voting access: Restricting voting rights and making it harder to vote.
* Censoring critical discussions in classrooms: Limiting the teaching of certain topics in schools.
* Rolling back trans rights: Disregarding the rights and needs of transgender individuals.
It's important to note that Project 2025 has been criticized by many for its potential to undermine democratic values, human rights, and civil liberties.

Yes, South Dakota Governor Kristi Noem did use the phrase "Ensuring the Security of God's Chosen People" in a statement expressing her support for Israel. In a piece written on March 8, 2024, Noem discussed her lifelong commitment to supporting Israel and the Jewish community, a stance she attributed to her faith and values instilled from her upbringing. Watching the channel show on PBS is interesting, but I have no desire to visit the tourist traps of the world. I have no bucket list in that department. Dad, did enough traveling for the two of us .

Watching Vladimir Putin make a speech to long table of dignitaries about the nuclear threat or any attack specially by Ukraine with western backing with he will consider a joint attack. I see a man who looks very much like Jake Sullivan. He's the Russian version. We are very much alike, but we're each other, I guess that's just how people are Forever wars require a policeman of the world. Guess that's us - think that sucks.

Those prehistoric Venus statues that showed pregnant or very heavy female never had faces as far as I know, nor did many other very ancient statues. I wonder if it was kind of like the Indians, some of whom thought that having a photo taken of them would rob them of their spirits. Maybe those ancients feared that an image of a face would cause spiritual "problems" and tabooed sculpting or painting them. (Or maybe most of them couldn’t sculpt well

But there must have been people who wanted to portray faces and eventually tried, and faces must've caught on, and taboos or restrictions lifted.

There is speculation and there's recklessness… avoid both but especially the latter.

Don't speed to get home to the wife or girlfriend on time. If she asks what took you so long - Just explain it.
Women are usually pretty understanding, they just don't want us to lie to them, and they're pretty truthful but not entirely of course. They lie almost as much as us but the nature and reasoning behind theirs probably tends to be a bit different than ours.

There's a difference tween knowing somethings about to go wrong and knowing what to do about it, the latter requires tools, training, and motivation.

I'm slightly optimistic about the Trump administration, but tween the neocons that he's appointed for foreign policy, the Democrats undermining him, and a general lack of conscience by both parties politicians it's not a great deal of confidence.

To me many British, especially their news “presenters”, sound like Harry Potter, but that doesn't mean the English aren't tough as Ivy aka the English variety that’s so hard to control.

Perhaps the homeless and indigent should be given a hand up instead of a handout and it should come at the expense of the billionaires that in so many cases put them there
But the English, like their Anglo-Saxon Germanic, cousins across the pond which some extent includes me are intent on using Ukraine as proxy to bleed Russia into submission, along with their neocon banker overlords
I mean the overlords of all, but especially the English and Americans. Who's version of the Bible is perhaps even more explicit that these people should manage our affairs

Next, I hear a story on NPR about 1800 British prisoners of war that have been made into slave labor in Japan, but we're on a ship torpedo by the Americans unknowingly and the Japanese evacuated their people over the next 24 hours and batten down the hatches so the British would all die is that Asians do not have a conscience or a moral compass or that it is different than ours because this morning I also heard Eric Bethel talking about the Chinese having the same quote. I certainly would not brag about our moral compass either I think you know why if not lots of people will tell you

Elon Musk has a lot of kids so let's say maybe he has 10 and he's worth $300 billion if something happens to him of course he's got the wives and girlfriends to worry about but if he didn't each of those 10 would be worth $30 billion how stupid is that?
Trump on the other hand might be worth three or 4 billion and he's got a bunch of kids grandkids, etc. too, but they'd only be worth maybe 100 million apiece
They may both be interested in a dynasty for themselves in their families
Without amending the constitution I don't think musk could ever run for president so he couldn't mount a challenge to Trump in 2024, but his kids will be able to mount challenges if the Trump kids are attempting to run things in 20 years
And who do the bridge think we sound like?
The white dudes for Kamala the most important thing was to protect their daughters right to abort their grandchildren. This is what somebody said on YouTube.
I think it was Douglas Murray

Most of us have heard of shrink-flation where the bag of potato chips doesn't have as much in it as it used to, but for some reason we're getting fatter. I guess it's that second bag we buy, to make up for what the first bag was missing.

I sometimes hear girls talk about it as the crotch area. I call it the muffin part and would describe it as a basically different perception.

Watching Audra singing Billie Jean on stage live and enjoying her moves, she looks like she 99% Caucasian, which I'm not supposed to mention much less harp on so I won't do the latter, but must say that archetype's the figure, face and moves I like best, nothing against others but I will not elevate them because of social niceties. I respect all the races but consider Caucasian women the most beautiful and when I say Caucasian, I don't mean 100% or even 75% but I do Unabashedly mean over about 50% and up… Her thick sneakers give her an extra inch - guessing she's 5:6 looking 5/7. Erik Bethel talks about the lack of mortal moral compass in China and I agree that it's lacking or at the very least different. confuses Confucius reportedly said something about steel steal a book that drives jives with their approach to intellectual property. We have the Christian compass or at least the Sudo Judeo/Christian One, which in my opinion is far superior, but not all of us adhere to it very well in fact, never heard of anybody being perfect in that respect. Certainly I would be charged with being a big failure in that respect by many people, but in my defense since I want to present one, maybe part of the reason you might say that about me is because you've been instructed to - and instructed not to consider any evidence other than what you were presented with, be it peeps or ancient texts. % hook line and sinker .

Trying to find the “right” screw to fix a rake:
We spend too much time doing one thing or the other when it comes to six of one or a 1/2 dozen of the other situations - but when it's really important, we often get lazy and do nothing.

I asked ChatGPT what’s the quote about perfection being the enemy of something:
The phrase you’re referring to is likely “Perfection is the enemy of the good”, which means that striving for perfection can prevent progress or the completion of good, worthwhile work. It suggests that focusing excessively on flawlessness can lead to inaction or failure to achieve a meaningful outcome.
This idea has been attributed to various sources, including:
1. Voltaire, the 18th-century French writer and philosopher, who wrote, “Le mieux est l’ennemi du bien” (The best is the enemy of the good) in his 1770 work La Bégueule.
2. The concept is also echoed in modern productivity and self-help philosophies, advocating for progress over perfection.

Some people said Twood George Bush the Second said about going out shopping, spending money and keeping the economy rolling quite literally and have never forgotten it. I would choose a slightly different path regarding that statement and some of his others:

I asked ChatGPT if George Bush said God told him to invade a rock Iraq:
The claim that George W. Bush said “God wanted him to invade Iraq” stems from comments reported by Palestinian leaders in 2003 during private discussions. They recalled that Bush mentioned feeling “a mission from God” to act in the Middle East, including interventions in Afghanistan and Iraq, as well as facilitating peace efforts for Palestinians and Israelis. However, these accounts were part of a documentary and have been contested by the White House, which declined to comment on the accuracy of such private conversations .
Bush often expressed his faith and belief that decisions should align with principles derived from his Christian convictions. For example, he frequently referred to religious ideas in justifying his leadership and policies but avoided explicitly attributing specific actions to divine instruction in his public statements. The interpretation of his remarks continues to be debated.
